

and Robert Huebner, Chief of Homeless Demonstration Projects at the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism; Dennis McCarty, Director of the Massachusetts Division of Substance Abuse Services; Milton Argeriou, Director, Stabilization Services Project in Boston; Pamela J. Fischer, Johns Hopkins University; and Deborah L. Dennis of the National Resource Center on Homelessness and Mental Illness. We thank them all, and the other experts whose material is incorporated in panels throughout the book.

A variety of service providers in eastern Massachusetts participated in interviews that helped to lay the foundation for Chapter 2 and, to a lesser extent, Chapter 8. We thank Paul McGerigle, Elyse Jacob, Randy Bailey, Susan Do, Dominic O'Donnell and Lindya Udori, Ira Greiff, Carol Johnson, Nancy Mahan, Karen McCarthy, Bob Richards and Susan Fazio, Sally Rizzo and Irene Lee, and Paul Robinson.

We also are indebted to the University of Massachusetts at Boston for its many efforts to facilitate faculty involvement in community affairs and for its support of our research and service efforts, both directly through grants and indirectly through its support of the graduate program in Applied Sociology. Dr. Fuad Safwat, Dean of Graduate Studies and Research, has provided needed resources at many critical points and has facilitated the development of the innovative graduate programs that make work such as ours possible. And without the assistance of many fine students in the graduate program, the research and service activities which this book reflects would not have occurred—we thank each of these students and apologize (although with some pride) that their names are too numerous to mention here. A special expression of gratitude goes to our outstanding secretary, Anne Foxx.

Most important, we thank the many other service providers and homeless people whom we have tapped for insights. We would never have been able to write this book without their willingness to collaborate on service and research projects and to share with us their experiences, techniques, and concerns.
