CONTENTS

List of figures x
List of tables xi
Notes on contributors xii
Preface xv
Acknowledgments xix

Introduction: characteristics of suicide attacks 1
AMI PEDAHZUR AND ARIE PERLIGER

Characteristics of suicide terrorist attacks 1

1 Defining suicide terrorism 13
ASSAF MOGHADAM

Introduction 13
Labeling suicide terrorism 14
Suicide attacks: narrow and broad 17
Conclusion 21

2 Dying to kill: motivations for suicide terrorism 25
MIA BLOOM

Motivations for suicide terror 35
Domestic politics and public support 41
The goals of suicide bombing: group competition, and outbidding 44
Religious versus nationalist suicide bombers 46

3 Dying to be martyrs: the symbolic dimension of suicide terrorism 54
MOHAMMED M. HAFEZ

Introduction 54
Is dying to kill rational? The limits of rationalist explanations 56
The role of religion, nationalism, and community in constituting a culture of martyrdom 61
Conclusion 75

4 The roots of suicide terrorism: a multi-causal approach 81
ASSAF MOGHADAM

Abstract 81
Introduction 81
A multi-causal approach to the study of suicide terrorism 83
The individual level of analysis (L1) 89
The organizational level of analysis (L2) 93
The environmental level of analysis (L3) 96
Conclusion 99

5 Suicide terrorism for secular causes 108
LEONARD WEINBERG

Postscript 120

6 Islam and al Qaeda 122
MARC SAGEMAN

The evolution of the global Salafi jihad ideology 122
Data 124
The global Salafi jihad and Islam 125
Joining the jihad 127
Motivating terrorist operations 129
Conclusion 131

7 Al-Qaeda and the global epidemic of suicide attacks 132
YORAM SCHWEITZER

Introduction 132
Al-Qaeda and Istishad 134

The suicide attacks of Al-Qaeda—an implementation of the concept of Istishad 142
Al-Qaeda's affiliates' suicide attacks 143
Conclusion 148

8 Being bin Laden: an Applied Decision Analysis procedure for analyzing and predicting terrorists decisions 152
ALEX MINTZ, J. TYSON CHATAGNIER, AND DAVID J. BRULÉ

Introduction 152
Defining and operationalizing suicide attacks 152
Applied Decision Analysis 153
The suicide attack on the USS Cole 156
The 1998 merger 157
Constructing bin Laden's decision matrix 157
Analysis: attack on the Cole 162
Analysis: merger with EIJ 170
Conclusion 174

9 Maghreb immigrants becoming suicide terrorists: a case study on religious radicalization processes in Spain 179
ROGELIO ALONSO AND FERNANDO REINARES

Introduction 179
The run up to the collective suicide: March 11, 2004 179
The suicide in Leganés on April 3, 2004 183
The seven suicide terrorists 185
Profiles and social networks 191

Index 199

FIGURES

I.1	Distribution of groups initiating suicide attacks by years and organizational structure	3
I.2	Distribution of suicide attacks according to years and strategic aims (percentages)	5
I.3	Distribution of suicide attacks by level of democracy of countries which were attacked	6
I.4	Distribution of suicide attacks by tactics and by organization (percentages)	8
I.5	Division of civilian targets in contrast to military targets by organizational campaigns (percentages)	9
I.6	Distribution of civilian targets by organization (percentages)	10
4.1	The levels of analysis and their interactions	86
4.2	The suicide terrorism cycle	87
7.1	Factors influencing a suicide bomber	133
7.2	Graph of worldwide suicide terrorism (as of July 31, 2005)	134
7.3	The globalization of suicide attack	138
7.4	Number of casualties and bombers in Saudi Arabia	147
7.5	Number of suicide attacks by months	147

TABLES

I.1 Level of democracy in the main countries which were targets of suicide attacks 6

5.1 US mission reports of Viet Cong assassinations and abductions, 1966–9 116

7.1 Comparison between aspects of Al-Qaeda suicide terrorists and the suicide terrorists of Al-Qaeda partner groups 144

7.2 Suicide attacks in Russia 146

8.1 Bin Laden's decision matrix—Cole bombing 163

8.2 Bin Laden's decision matrix—EIJ merger 172