
Contents

List of tables and figures	vii
Foreword	xi
Preface	xiii
Acknowledgements	xvii
1 Models of understanding: how families continue to be pathologised and misunderstood	1
2 Coping with alcohol and drug problems in the family: a review of previous qualitative research	20
3 The three study locations: Mexico City, South-West England and indigenous Northern Territory, Australia	41
4 A description of the study in three socio-cultural groups	69
5 The impact of excessive drinking and drug taking on family members	95
6 How family members cope	118
7 The support family members get from other people	145
8 Variations on a theme: what difference does culture make?	168
9 An integrated view of alcohol and drug problems in the family	186

10 Ways of empowering family members	231
Notes	255
References	257
Author index	281
Subject index	283

List of tables and figures

Tables

4.1	In-depth interview for family members: main topics and subtopics	73
4.2	Socio-demographic characteristics of family members in Mexico City, South-West England and the Australian Northern Territory	77
4.3	Relationship of interviewed family members to the relatives whose drinking or drug taking was of concern	78
5.1	Sources of family members' worries about relatives drinking or taking drugs excessively	104–105
5.2	Bad feelings associated with being a close family member of a relative with a drinking or drug problem	111–112
5.3	Signs and symptoms of family members' ill health	115
6.1	Phrases family members used that indicated putting up with a relative's excessive drinking or drug taking	122–123
6.2	Ways of talking and telling that family members used with their relatives	129–130
6.3	Ways of trying to limit a relative's excessive drinking or drug taking, as described by family members	132
6.4	Protecting self, family and home: examples of family members' actions	135
6.5	Phrases family members used that indicate putting distance between themselves and their problem drinking or drug-taking relatives	136–137
6.6	Family members' opinions for and against different ways of managing a relative's excessive drinking or drug taking	140–141
7.1	Categories of positive social support received by family members	146
7.2	Sources of positive social support for family members	147

7.3	Barriers in the way of family members receiving positive social support	164–165
9.1	Symptoms of poor physical and general health reported by family members of relatives with drinking or drug problems	195
9.2	Some of the main distinctions between individualistic and collectivist cultures	211
9.3	Examples of research on other forms of stressful life circumstances for family members	222
9.4	The particular qualities of having to cope with excessive drinking or drug taking in the family which, in combination, make it unique and highly stressful	230
10.1	Attempting to empower family members in Mexico, England and Australia	233–235
10.2	Other projects for empowering family members reported in the literature	241–246

Figures

1.1	The stress-strain-coping-support model	3
4.1	Example of the family of a Mexican father living in a smaller household	81
4.2	Example of the family of a Mexican mother living in a larger household	82
4.3	Example of the family of an English partner	86
4.4	Example of the family of an English mother	86
4.5	Example of the family of an Australian cousin living in a remote, rural community	88
4.6	Example of the family of an Australian partner living in an urban area	89
5.1	The stress of living with a close relative with an alcohol or drug problem	102
5.2	Threat to the home and family posed by a close relative's excessive drinking or drug taking	110
6.1	Reasons family members give for putting up with a relative's excessive drinking or drug taking	126
7.1	Examples of family member, relative, and potential supportive other triangles	154
7.2	The network of supportive and unsupportive others surrounding a family member coping with a relative's excessive drinking or drug taking: an English mother	166
7.3	The network of supportive and unsupportive others surrounding a family member coping with a relative's excessive drinking or drug taking: a Mexican wife	166

7.4	The network of supportive and unsupportive others surrounding a family member coping with a relative's excessive drinking or drug taking: an Australian father	167
9.1	Four facets of the experience of living with a close relative with an alcohol or drug problem	191
9.2	Eight ways family members cope with a close relative's problem drinking or drug taking	200
9.3	An integrated view of the impact of a close relative's excessive drinking or drug taking	206
9.4	A summary of some of the main factors that modify the core, universal experience of being affected by and concerned about a close relative's excessive drinking or drug taking	220