

INTRODUCTION. The Two Voices of the Baroque	ix
---------------------------------------------	----

PART I

I. The Older German Texts and Polyphony	I
II. Music and the Beginnings of the New Poetry (i) Jakob Regnart and the Villanella	7
III. Music and the Beginnings of the New Poetry (ii) Hans Leo Hassler and the Canzonet	14

PART II

IV. The Transition to the Continuo Lied: Johann Hermann Schein, Poet and Composer	21
V. The Creation of the Continuo Lied: Martin Opitz and Johann Nauwach	34
VI. Friendship, Poetry, and Song, and the Establishment of the Continuo Lied: the Königsberg Poets and Heinrich Albert	44
VII. The Flowering of Baroque Song: Adam Krieger, Poet and Composer	53
VIII. Music in the Service of Poetry: Johann Rist and his Composers	65
IX. Poetry as Music: Philipp Zesen and the Nuremberg Poets	73
X. The End of the Continuo Lied: Andreas Gryphius and Carl Friedrich Briegel	78

PART III

XI. Aria and Song in the Later Baroque: Philipp Erlebach	83
XII. The Last Phase: Barthold Heinrich Brockes and George Frederick Handel	90
XIII. The Transition: Friedrich von Hagedorn, Georg Philipp Telemann, and Johann Valentin Görner	97
EPILOGUE. The Heart's Assurance	109
APPENDIX A. Musical Examples	113
APPENDIX B. Notes on Recordings	207
BIBLIOGRAPHY	209
INDEX	217