

Contents

Preface	page xi
1 Introduction: women, the novel, and the German nation	I
2 The emergence of German domestic fiction	18
Introduction	18
Richardson: Clarissa's sacrifice	21
Rousseau: Julie's compromise	25
Sophie von LaRoche: Sophie's survival	30
3 German women respond to the French Revolution	41
Introduction	41
Caroline von Wolzogen: for a kinder, gentler patriarchy	43
Friederike Helene Unger: Julchen Grünthal's father fixation	51
Therese Huber: patriarchy vs. patriotism in Die Familie Seldorf	60
Sophie Mereau: experimental fictions	74
4 Liberation's aftermath: the early Restoration	94
Introduction	94
Caroline de la Motte Fouqué: Romantic nationalism confronts modernity	98
Henriette Frölich [Jerta]: a cosmopolitan in Kentucky	107
Karoline von Woltmann: cosmopolitan conspirators at home	114
Johanna Schopenhauer: Gabriele's renunciation	122
Annette von Droste-Hülshoff: Ledwina's lethargy	129
5 Feminists in the Vormärz	136
Introduction	136
Ida Hahn-Hahn: the curse of the idle rich	140
Fanny Lewald: republican, feminist, Jew	152
Louise Aston: "Amazons," aristocrats, and other revolutionaries	170
6 Eugenie Marlitt: the art of liberal compromise	183
Notes	202
Works cited	221
Index	238