

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgments	xiii
Part 1: The Form of Life in Allegorical Sensibility	1
1 The Dantesque Enigma	3
Two Types of Allegory	3
The Auerbach-Singleton School	11
Fourfold Allegory	13
Fourfold Allegory and Biblical Exegesis	21
Figuralism Free of Literal Fundamentalism	27
Trinitarian Figuralism in the Commedia	35
2 The Dionysian Tout Ensemble	50
Petrarch on the Mount of Allegory	50
Two Streams of Platonism	54
Pseudo-Dionysius and Christian Neoplatonism	57
Allegory of Words and Allegory of Things	72
From Theology of Allegory to Theology of Analogy	77
Dionysian Allegorical Realism	89
Fourfold Allegory Again	91
Dante in the Dionysian Tradition	94
Petrarch's Descent to the Literal Plane	104
Part 2: The Form of Life in Literal Sensibility	111
3 The Petrarchan Dilemma	113
Petrarch's Self-Analysis in the Secretum meum	115
The Petrarchan Sickness in the Modern West	127
Paradox and the Petrarchan Sensibility	130
The Triumphs	136
The Africa	141

Scipionic Individualism	156
The Petrarchan Circle	161
4 The Boccaccian Tour de Force	165
Boccaccio in the Allegorical Tradition	165
Boccaccio in the Classical Tradition	176
Boccaccio's Resolution of the Petrarchan Dilemma	189
The Decameron	193
The Sovereign Individual in the Decameron	207
Nominalism in the Decameron	217
Boccaccio the Humanist and His Anthropocentrism	225
The Boccaccian Subversion and the Scotistic Maneuver	229
The Scotistic Revolution and Modern Philosophy	237
The Thematic Dialectic of the Dionysian Ethos	243
The Dionysian Ethos and the Faustian Tradition	255
Notes	261
Bibliography	269
Index	275