

Contents

Acknowledgements vi

Transliteration and proper names ix

Abbreviations x

Introduction. Formalism, structuralism, semiotics 1

*Chapter One. The semiotics movement in the USSR:
a survey 8*

I. Origins 8

II. The Moscow-Tartu semiotics group 22

*Chapter Two. Structure as opposition: Lotman's
Lectures on structural poetics 38*

I. The dissociation from the past 38

II. A general theory of art 45

III. A theory of poetic language 53

IV. Text and extra-text 63

Chapter Three. Meaning in literature 69

I. Structure of language and structure of thought 69

II. The problem of meaning in literature 72

Chapter Four. Problems of typology 83

- I. The typology of literature 83
- II. The search for the universals of culture 87

Chapter Five. Cultural history, text analysis, and creative procedures 101

- I. Cultural history 102
- II. Text analysis and creative procedures 104

Chapter Six. Structure: system or conflict? Lotman's The structure of the artistic text 118

- I. Art as language 120
- II. The artistic text 128
- III. The composition of the work of literature 139

Chapter Seven. Practical studies and a new theory 149

- I. Practical studies, genre definition, and generative poetics 149
- II. Structure as point of view 170

Conclusion. Semiotics and literature 177

Appendix I. Lotman's early writings 180

Appendix II. Papers of the Gorky conference, the 1962 symposium, and of the four summer schools 186

Appendix III. The debates about structuralism in Soviet literary journals, 1963–1969 200

Bibliography 205

Index of names, terms, and titles 232