

Contents

Acknowledgements	page xi
A Note on Translations	xiii
1 Introduction	1
Part One Richardson and Sterne: 'Sentiment as Principle' and 'Sentiment as Feeling'	13
2 Richardson: Sentiment as Principle	15
3 Sterne: Sentiment as Feeling	40
Part Two Diderot and Goethe: Quizzical Approaches to Realism	61
4 Diderot: Fact and Value or 'Paradox in the Fiction'	63
5 Goethe's Werther : Identification and Judgement	92
Part Three Tolstoy and Dickens: Moral Realism and the Language of Feeling	109
6 Tolstoy: Truth of Feeling and the 'Sentiment of Reality'	111
7 Dickens: The Fiction of Popular Sentiment	139
Part Four Flaubert, Joyce and Nabokov: The Rejection of Sentiment and the Feeling of Truth	161
8 Modernist Parody and the Irony of Irony	163
9 Conclusion	188
Notes	197
Bibliography	204
Index	206