LIST OF CONTENTS

PART I – STUDIES IN LEXICAL RELATIONS

Introduction

1. Relevance to Linguistic Theory, Intention and Scope 1
2. Areas of Evidence for the Prelexical Categorial Structure 5

Chapter 1: The Grammatical Process of Incorporation (Polycategorial Lexical Attachment)

1.1. The Occurrence and Formalization of Incorporation 9
1.2. Incorporation and Deletion Compared 19
1.3. Further Examples of Incorporation of Prepositions 24
1.4. Incorporation of Nouns and Adjectives 34

Chapter 2: Some Simple Sentence Patterns and their Inter-Relations

2.1. The Theme as the Subject of Motional Verbs 37
2.2. The Theme as Other than Subject with Motional Verbs 38
2.3. The Possibility of a Transformational Relationship between Buy and Sell 42
2.4. The Theme with NonMotional Verbs 45
2.5. Motional, Durational, and NonDurational Verbs 50

Chapter 3: Prepositions

3.1. The Negativity of From 53
3.2. Obligatory Presence of Away before From in NonMotional Expressions 55
3.3. Prepositional Expressions of Possession 55
3.4. Extension of the Notion of Possession and Formalization 58
3.5. The Semantic Relationship between Motional and Durational Verbs 62
3.6. The Expression of Goal 66
3.7. The Expression of Location 69
3.8. The Expression of Accompaniment 71
3.9. The Expression of Direction (Accompaniment Modified by Location or Goal) 75
3.10. Source-Goal Patterns and their Homogeneity 78

3.11. Subordinate Expression of Goal 85
3.12. The Nature of Away and other Particles 87
Chapter 4: Formalization of the Prelexical Base
4.1. Constituent Structure 91
4.2. The Attachment of Lexical Items to the Prelexical Base 96
4.3. Surface Environmental Possibilities for Incorporating Verbs 103
4.4. Subordinate Expressions of Goal for Incorporating Verbs 113
Chapter 5: Further Sentence Types
5.1. Positional and Possessional Transitions: the Omission of To 121
5.2. Transitions Involving Information Nominals as Theme 125
5.3. Separate Lexicalization of Subject-Identified Prepositional Phrases 128
5.4. Non-Lexicalization of Redundant Expressions 135
5.5. Get with an Abstract Theme 136
5.6. The Identificational Parameter 140
5.7. Adjectives and the Identificational Parameter 148
5.8. The Positional Parameter and the Progressive 149
5.9. Analysis of Remain 152
Chapter 6: Agentive Verbs
6.1. Occurrence of Agentive Verbs 157
6.2. Syntactic and Semantic Properties of Agentive Verbs 159
6.3. Occurrence of the Permissive Agentive 164
6.4. Causative Verbs 168
6.5. Permissive Verbs 173
6.6. The Causative Agentive for Durational Verbs 177
6.7. The Causative Agentive in the Identificational Parameter 189
6.8. The Semantic Relationship between the Causative and the Permissive Agentive 193
6.9. Formalization of Agentive Verbs 195
6.10. Table of Verbs 208

PART II – FUNCTIONS OF THE LEXICON IN FORMAL DESCRIPTIVE GRAMMARS
Introduction 213
Chapter 1: Fundamental Assumption: Abandoning Monocategorial Lexical Attachment
1.1. Historical Perspectives 215
1.1.1. The Semantic Lexicon 216
1.1.2. The Selectional Lexicon: Feature Cross-Classification 217

1.1.3. The Transformational Lexicon: Co-Occurrence Relationships 222
1.1.4. The Translational Lexicon: The Semantic Base Component 227
1.2. The Present Work 230
1.2.1. Unity of the Base Component 230
1.2.1.1. Specificatory Categories vs. Contrastive Features 233; 1.2.1.2. Categorial Trees vs. Feature Matrices 237
1.2.2. Unity of the Lexical Component 251
1.2.2.1. Idiosyncratic Mapping vs. Rule Features 251; 1.2.2.2. Ordinary Lexical Attachment vs. the Spelling-out Rules 257
1.2.3. Unity of Semantics and Syntax 258
1.2.3.1. The Syntactic Aspect of Semantics 261; 1.2.3.2. The Semantic Aspect of Syntax 265
Chapter 2: Lexical Component
2.1. Principles Governing the Possibility of Lexical Attachment 275
2.1.1. The Lexical Attachment Criterion 275
2.1.2. The Principle of Disjunctive Ordering 280
2.1.2.1. Limiting the Semantic Fields 280; 2.1.2.2. Limiting the Syntactic Environment 298
2.1.3. The Significance of Cycles for Lexical Attachment 303
2.1.3.1. Redefinition of Disjunctive Ordering Principle: Relative Constituency of Categories 304; 2.1.3.2. Cyclical Applicability of the Disjunctive Ordering Principle 309; 2.1.3.3. Conventions Governing the Automatic Extension and Limitation of Word Senses: Refinement of the Lexical Attachment Criterion 313
2.2. Content of the Lexicon 320
2.2.1. Alternatives in Manifesting Underlying Categories 320
2.2.1.1. Fully Productive vs. Nonproductive Word Extension 323
2.2.2. Tendencies in Lexical Content: Simplicity Criterion for Lexical Structure 325
2.2.2.1. Effects of the Simplicity Criterion 329
2.3. Conventions Operating during Lexical Attachment: Transformational vs. Lexical Treatment of Word Extension 332
2.3.1. Comparing Simplicity of Lexical and Transformational Specificity 338
2.3.1.1. Avoidance of Counteractive Specifications 340
2.3.2. Effects of the Structure of Lexical Entries 341

2.3.2.1. Defining the Notion 'Word' 341; 2.3.2.2. Phonological Distinction between Fully and Nonproductive Affixations 344; 2.3.2.3. Disjunctive Delimitation of Fully Productive Affixations by Semi-Productive Affixations 347

2.3.3. Structural Changes during Lexical Attachment 348

2.3.3.1. Tree Restructuring 348; 2.3.3.2. Intraword Morpheme Order 350; 2.3.3.3. Conventions Governing Morpheme Omission in Word Extension 356; 2.3.3.4. The Attachment of Genitive Markers with Affixal Forms 358

Literature 369

Subject and Author Index 371