

Contents

Acknowledgements vi

1	Introduction	1
2	Preliminaries	7
3	Linguistic areas and diffusion	15
3.1	What can diffuse	19
3.2	Languages in contact	22
4	The family tree model	28
4.1	Criteria	30
4.2	Proto-languages	45
4.3	Dating	46
4.4	Subgrouping	49
5	Modes of change	54
5.1	Changes within languages	54
5.2	Language splitting	58
5.3	The origin of language	63
6	The punctuated equilibrium model	67
6.1	Linguistic equilibrium	68
6.2	Punctuation	73
6.3	Some examples	85
7	More on proto-languages	97
8	Recent history	103
9	Today's priorities	116
9.1	Why bother?	116
9.2	Some modern myths	128
9.3	What every linguist should do	135
10	Summary and prospects	139
10.1	The punctuated equilibrium model	139
10.2	Concerning comparative linguistics	140
10.3	Concerning descriptive linguistics	143
10.4	Concerning languages	145
	Appendix – where the comparative method discovery procedure fails	149
	References	153
	Index	163