

Contents

	Introduction: The Pacific World and Its Atlantic Antecedents	1
1	Australia: Terra Nullius by Design	13
2	New Zealand: Conquest by Contract	47
3	New Zealand: Conquest by Land Tenure Reform	84
4	Hawaii: Preparing To Be Colonized	128
5	California: Terra Nullius by Default	163
6	British Columbia: Terra Nullius as Kindness	195
7	Oregon and Washington: Compulsory Treaties	231
8	Fiji and Tonga: The Importance of Indigenous Political Organization	260
9	Alaska: Occupancy and Neglect	287
	Conclusion: What Produced Colonial Land Policy?	315
	Abbreviations	322
	Notes	323
	Index	381

Illustrations

Map of the Pacific colonies in the nineteenth century   x

- 1 Thomas Medland, View of a Hut in New South Wales (1789)   25
- 2 Donald McLean with Maori landowners (1865)   66
- 3 Crowd outside Native Land Court, Ahipara, New Zealand (late nineteenth century)   101
- 4 King Kamehameha III of Hawaii (mid-nineteenth century)   145
- 5 Paul Emmert, View of Honolulu from the Harbor (ca. 1854)   159
- 6 Anonymous, drawings of “Digger” Indian dwellings (ca. 1850)   170
- 7 Songhees woman, in a photo by Frederick Dally (ca. 1860)   207
- 8 James Douglas, first governor of British Columbia (ca. 1860)   215
- 9 Isaac Stevens, first governor of the Washington Territory (mid-nineteenth century)   255
- 10 Two white men overseeing a Fijian workforce (ca. 1875)   276
- 11 William Hodges, Afia-too-ca: A burying place in the Isle of Amsterdam (1777)   285
- 12 Chilkat Tlingit women and girls (1890s)   311