

TABLE OF CONTENTS

1. INTRODUCTION	1
1.1. General overview	1
1.2. Introductory comments on the nature of linguistic persuasion	2
1.3. Statement of purpose	4
2. THE LANGUAGE OF PERSUASION	7
2.1. The theoretical approaches to persuasion	7
2.1.1. Process models	7
2.1.2. The construct "World Image"	10
2.1.3. World image as a right hemisphere function	11
2.1.4. Linguistic relativity revisited	13
2.1.5. Speech act theory	14
2.1.6. Summary	16
2.2. The role of language in the persuasion process	17
2.2.1. Experimental findings	18
2.2.2. Information processing and persuasion	20
2.2.3. The language of clinical hypnosis	21
2.2.4. Critical linguistics	26
2.2.5. The stylistic figures of rhetoric	28
2.2.6. Summary	30
2.3. The language of television advertising	30
2.4. Summary	33
3. THE LANGUAGE OF TELEVANGELISM	35
3.1. Background to the description	35
3.2. Data	37
3.3. Methodology	38
3.4. Procedure	38
3.4.1. Transcriptions	38
3.4.2. Isolation of target sections	38
3.4.3. Analysis	39

4. RESULTS AND DISCUSSION	41
4.1. Linguistic novelty	41
4.1.1. Lexical novelty	41
4.1.2. Morphological or syntactic novelty	42
4.1.3. Syntactic innovation	42
4.1.4. Semantic anomaly	43
4.1.5. Summary	43
4.2. Manipulative persuasion and repetition of names	44
4.3. Names as mini-advertisements	46
4.4. Mitigation of claims	49
4.5. Saying things indirectly	51
4.6. Adjectivalization processes	56
4.7. Imperative structures	57
4.8. Linguistic categories not found	61
5. SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS	63
FOOTNOTES	67
APPENDICES	69
A. H.P. GRICE'S PRINCIPLES OF CONVERSATION	69
B. TRANSCRIPTS OF PROMOTIONAL SEGMENTS	70
REFERENCES	83