
Contents

1	Introduction	1
	The notion of competence and language acquisition	2
	The present study	4
2	The study of register variation	6
	The notion of 'register'	6
	The features and functions of particular registers	15
3	An overview of developmental socio-linguistics	32
	Social class variation	34
	Ethnic variation	39
	Gender-related variation	41
	Acquisition of register variation	47
	Referential communication tasks	50
	Social roles and relations and their linguistic marking	52
	Stereotyped relations of social categories	64
	The learning process	72
	Summary	74
4	Methodological considerations	75
	The present study: methodological constraints	75
	Procedure: the use of 'controlled improvisation'	76
	The subjects	79
	Data collection	80
	Analysis of data	81
	Strengths and weaknesses of this approach	82

5	Discourse structure and content	84
	Introduction	84
	Details of the analysis	84
	Results	86
	Summary of conversational structure	99
	Topic	100
	Evidence of topic awareness	118
	Summary of topic findings	119
6	Variation in utterance form and function	120
	Introduction	120
	The analyses	120
	Results	125
	Summary of sentence types and speech acts	142
7	Phonological, lexical and morphological markings of register	147
	Introduction	147
	Family session	147
	Doctor session	150
	Classroom session	152
	Quantitative analyses of lexicon	157
	Summary	160
8	Conclusions	163
	Introduction	163
	Acquiring registers	163
	Learning features of registers	165
	Evidence of awareness of register variation	167
	Sex differences	171
	The motivation behind speech modifications	172
	Where do we go from here?	172
	Bibliography	176
	Index	196