

目录

---

Contents

|                                                |           |
|------------------------------------------------|-----------|
| Preface and Acknowledgements            | viii      |
| Introduction                            | 1  |
| 1 Ancient China: The Three Dynasties    | 14 |
| The Hsia/Xia dynasty                           | 15        |
| The Shang dynasty                              | 17        |
| The Chou/Zhou dynasty                          | 27        |
| The age of the philosophers                    | 37        |
| 2 Rhythms of the Universe               | 39 |
| The Book of Changes: the I Ching/Yijing | 39        |
| Yin and yang                                   | 47        |
| The Five Agents                                | 56        |
| 3 Confucianism                          | 65 |
| The ju/ru tradition                     | 66        |
| Confucius                                      | 67        |
| The Analects                            | 75        |
| Teachings                                      | 77        |
| The Confucian Classics                  | 81        |
| Confucian development                          | 84        |
| Confucianism in formation                      | 84        |
| Meng-tzu/Mengzi and Hsün-tzu/Xunzi             | 85        |
| Confucianism in adaptation                     | 87        |
| 4 Classical Taoism                      | 92 |
| What is Taoism                                 | 92        |

|                                                        |            |
|--------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| Lao-tzu/Laozi and the Tao Te Ching/Daodejing    | 93         |
| Chuang-tzu/Zhuangzi                                    | 96         |
| Lieh-tzu/Liezi                                         | 99         |
| Tao                                             | 100        |
| Creation and reversal                                  | 103        |
| Te/De                                           | 105        |
| Wu-wei : non-action                             | 107        |
| Tzu-jan/ziran : naturalness and spontaneity     | 109        |
| 5 Buddhism                                      | 113 |
| The advent of Buddhism in China                        | 113        |
| The T'ien-t'ai/Tiantai (Jap. Tendai) school            | 119        |
| Hua-yen/Huayan                                         | 125        |
| Devotional Buddhism                                    | 127        |
| Pure Land Buddhism                                     | 133        |
| 6 Religious Taoism                              | 140 |
| Historical development                                 | 140        |
| Alchemy                                                | 144        |
| Life beyond Earth                                      | 152        |
| Religious praxis                                       | 159        |
| Immortals                                              | 162        |
| Sages                                                  | 164        |
| 7 Neo-Confucianism                              | 167 |
| The transforming face of Confucianism                  | 167        |
| The place of women in Confucian culture                | 171        |
| The Five Masters                                       | 174        |
| The dissemination of Confucianism                      | 181        |
| Modern New Confucianism                                | 187        |
| 8 Ch'an Buddhism                                | 195 |
| Bodhidharma                                            | 196        |
| Hui-k'o/Huike                                          | 198        |
| Hui-neng/Huineng                                       | 201        |
| The Zen movement after Hui-neng                        | 203        |
| The Five Houses                                        | 208        |
| Kuei-yang/Guiyang (Jap. Igyo) and the circular figures | 209        |
| Lin-chi/Linji (Jap. Rinzai) and shouting and beating   | 209        |
| Koan practice                                          | 210        |
| The master-pupil relationship                          | 213        |

|                                                                         |            |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| Ts'ao-tung/Caodong (Jap. Soto) and the formula of the five ranks        | 215        |
| Yun-men/Yunmen (Jap. Ummon) and the "pass of a single word"             | 218        |
| Fa-yen/Fayan (Jap. Hogen) and the inner unity of the six marks of being | 218        |
| The Sung/Song period                                                    | 219        |
| Meditation                                                              | 221        |
| 9 Popular Religion                                               | 224 |
| What is popular religion?                                               | 224        |
| Deities of popular religion                                             | 227        |
| The calendar                                                            | 238        |
| Festivals                                                               | 239        |
| Popular praxis                                                          | 242        |
| 10 Chinese Religions Today                                       | 250 |
| Communist China                                                         | 250        |
| Confucianism                                                            | 253        |
| Taoism                                                                  | 255        |
| Buddhism                                                                | 256        |
| Popular religion                                                        | 257        |
| Influences of Chinese religions in the West                             | 257        |
| Notes                                                            | 266        |
| Glossary                                                         | 297        |
| Further Reading                                                  | 306        |
| Index                                                            | 309        |