

CONTENTS

|  |           |
|--|-----------|
| Acknowledgements   | ix        |
| Abbreviations  | xi        |
| 1 Introduction  | 1  |
| 1.1 The problem  | 1         |
| 1.2 The question of morphonology                               | 3         |
| 1.3 Why Italian metaphony?                                     | 7         |
| 1.4 Approaches to the problem, and strategies for testing them | 9         |
| 1.5 Structure of this book                                     | 15        |
| Notes  | 17        |
| 2 Phonetic and morphological conditioning               | 19 |
| 2.1 Kruszewski and Baudouin                                    | 19        |
| 2.2 'Naturalness' vs. 'arbitrariness'                          | 27        |

Contents

|  |            |
|--|------------|
| Notes  | 40         |
| 3 Morphology and morphologization                   | 42  |
| 3.1 Introduction   | 42         |
| 3.2 Trubetzkoy and the autonomy of morphology              | 43         |
| 3.3 Conditions on morphologization                         | 50         |
| 3.4 Conclusion   | 64         |
| Notes  | 65         |
| 4 Morphological conditioning of phonetic processes? | 67  |
| 4.1 Possible types of conditioning                         | 67         |
| 4.2 Does morphology trigger sound change?                  | 68         |
| 4.3 Morphemes as phonological domains                      | 73         |
| 4.4 Morphologically promoted sound change                  | 76         |
| 4.5 Conclusion   | 84         |
| Notes  | 85         |
| 5 The interactive view of morphology                | 88  |
| 5.1 Introduction   | 88         |
| 5.2 Matthews' conception of morphology                     | 89         |
| 5.3 Dressler's morphology and 'naturalness'                | 92         |
| Notes  | 109        |
| 6 Origins and nature of Italian metaphony           | 111 |

Contents

|  |            |
|--|------------|
| 6.1 Introduction   | 111        |
| 6.2 Metaphonic configurations and the evolution of metaphony   | 112        |
| 6.3 Metaphony as phonetic process                              | 134        |
| 6.4 The dynamicity of metaphony                                | 136        |
| 6.5 Conclusion   | 141        |
| Notes  | 143        |
| 7 Metaphony in the inflectional paradigms               | 148 |
| 7.1 Introduction   | 148        |
| 7.2 Metaphony and the structure of the verbal paradigm         | 149        |
| 7.3 Metaphony and the structure of the declensional paradigm   | 152        |
| 7.4 Phonetic merger of the inflections                         | 153        |
| 7.5 Metaphony in the modern paradigms                          | 154        |
| 7.6 Local variations in the modern paradigms, and their causes | 170        |
| 7.7 Hypermetaphony   | 179        |
| Appendix: AIS and ALI references given in this chapter         | 188        |
| Notes  | 189        |
| 8 The metaphonic evidence                               | 193 |
| 8.1 The 'quasi-phonetic' approach                              | 193        |
| 8.2 Prosodic representation of morphological metaphony?        | 210        |
| 8.3 Is metaphony morphologically triggered?                    | 212        |

Contents

|   |            |
|---|------------|
| 8.4 Evidence for a 'weak' conjunctive analysis            | 218        |
| 8.5 Conjunctive interaction: hypermetaphony               | 223        |
| Notes   | 228        |
| 9 Phonetic vulnerability in diffuse paradigms      | 232 |
| 9.1 The significance of hypermetaphony                    | 232        |
| 9.2 On the phonetic vulnerability of the verb             | 237        |
| 9.3 Conclusion  | 244        |
| Notes   | 245        |
| 10 Characteristics of morphonology                 | 246 |
| 10.1 Introduction   | 246        |
| 10.2 Representational characteristics                     | 248        |
| 10.3 A frontier zone                                      | 260        |
| Notes   | 264        |
| Appendix: Italian and Swiss localities cited       | 267 |
| Map 1 Italy: regions and provincial centres cited  | 272 |
| Map 2 Outline map of the metaphonic configurations | 273 |
| Bibliographical references                         | 274 |
| Index  | 289 |