

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction

Jan Baetens, Transatlantic Encounters of the Second Type	7
---	---

Part I: Trauma and Violence Representation in the Graphic Novel

Section A

Laurie Kaplan, Over the Top in the Aftermath of The Great War: Two Novels, Too Graphic	13
James Reibman, Fredric Wertham, Spiegelman's Maus , and Representations of the Holocaust	23
Ed Tan, The Telling Face in Comic Strip and Graphic Novel	31

Section B

Sue Vice, "It's about time": The Chronotope of the Holocaust in Art Spiegelman's Maus	47
Ole Frahm, "These papers had too many memories . So I burned them". Genealogical Remembrance in Art Spiegelman's Maus. A Survivor's Tale	61
Gene Kannenberg Jr., "I Looked Just Like Rudolph Valentino": Identity and Representation in Maus	79
Anke Gilleir, "Et il n'y eut plus d'espoir". On Fiction and History in Jacques Tardi's Les Aventures Extraordinaires d'Adèle Blanc-Sec	91
Michael Hein, What Haunts a Soldier's Mind: Monsters, Demons and the Lost Trenches of Memory. Representations of Combat Trauma in the Works of Jacques Tardi	101

Part II: Contemporary Graphic Novels and Practices

Section A

Marni Sandweiss, Redrawing the West: Jack Jackson's Comanche Moon	115
Heike Elisabeth Jüngst, Carol Lay's Joy Ride: How to Become Yourself By Being Someone Else	131
Jeffrey Lewis, The Dual Nature of Apocalypse in Watchmen	139
Jean-Louis Tilleuil, Narrative Specularity and Sociocritical Stakes in the Contemporary French-Speaking Comic Strip Production	145
Libbie McQuillan, Texte, Image, Récit: The Textual Worlds of Benoît Peeters	157

Section B

Mario Saraceni, Relatedness: Aspects of Textual Connectivity in Comics	167
Jack Post, Hypertextual Experiences of World War I	181
Patrick Maynard, The Time It Takes	191