

Contents

Abbreviations

xi

1. The Problem of the hi-conjugation

1

§1. Introduction: Hrozný. §2. The descriptive situation. §3. Origin of the mi-conjugation. §4. The hi-conjugation endings. §5. Hic et nunc i*. §6. Formulation of the problem. §7. The perfect theory: general difficulties. §8. Eichner's account. §9. Objections: contrast between šākk- and wewakk-. §10. Typological objections. §11. Absence of word equations with the perfect. §12. Other problems. §13. Reduplication in the perfect. §14. The perfect theory: summary of difficulties. §15. Cowgill's theory. §16. Objections to Cowgill's theory. §17. The middle theory: Rosenkranz. §18. The middle theory: Kurylowicz. §19. The Neu–Meid theory. §20. Objections to the Neu–Meid theory. §21. The comparison with the thematic conjugation. §22. Review.

2. Morphological Preliminaries: The Perfect and the Middle 30

§23. The perfect: general. §24. The perfect endings. §25. Tenses and moods of the perfect. §26. Hitt. wewakta. §27. The 3 pl. pluperfect in Vedic. §28. GAv. cikōitarəš. §29. Prehistory of the perfect vocalism. §30. Perfect and middle. §31. The middle endings: general. §32. The middle: first and second persons. §33. The middle: third person. §34. 3 sg. *-o(r) vs. *-to(r). §35. 3 pl. *-(ē)ro. §36. Dialectal *-(n)tro. §37. Summary of middle endings. §38. Relationship of the perfect and middle endings. §39. Relictal character of the perfect endings. §40. Word-final *-oH and *-oHu. §41. Typological resemblance of the perfect and the thematic conjugation.

3. The h₂e-conjugation: Root Presents

64

§42. hi-verbs and PIE presents. §43. Hitt. mall(a)-. §44. Cognates of mall(a)-. §45. Meillet's solution. §46. The perfect endings in present active function. §47. h₂e-conjugation paradigm of molh₂*- / melh₂*-. §48. Paradigm of konk*- / kenk*-. §49. Other PIE molō-presents. §50. Other molō-presents in Hittite. §51. The type šākk- / šekk-. §52. Origin of the pattern šešir : šašanzi. §53. Origin of hi-conjugation ablaut types. §54. Present vs. imperfect in the h₂e-conjugation. §55. Provisionally revised paradigms.

4. The h₂e-conjugation: i-presents

91

§56. Characterized h₂e-conjugation presents. §57. The dai-type. §58. Etymological connections. §59. *-i- as a stem-formative. §60. h₂e-conjugation i-presents. §61. The ablaut pattern dāi : tiyanzi. §62. Reflexes of dheh₂*- 'suck'. §63. Ved. dháyati and the *-AHiHA- rule. §64. Ved. vyáyati, kṣáyati, Gk. κτέομαι, etc. §65. The Vedic type syāti. §66. Narten i-presents. §67. Overview of i-present reflexes. §68. * bhuH-i - 'become'. §69. Hittite treatment of i -presents. §70. PIE distribution of *- i - vs. *- ie/o- . §71. Hitt. mema/i- , uppa/i- , etc. §72. The 2, 3 sg. pret. in - išta (- ešta). §73. The 'duratives' in - anna/i- . §74. Ved. - āyá- vs. - anyá- . §75. Presents in *- nH-i- : summary.

5. The h₂e -conjugation: Other Characterized Presents	128
§76. The type Hitt. mimma- = Gk. μίμνω . §77. Paradigm of PIE * mí-mn- . §78. PIE s -presents: overview. §79. Reflexes of s -presents in Hittite. §80. Hitt. išš(a)- , šišša- , etc. §81. The newahh -type. §82. u -presents.
6. Aorists of the h₂e -conjugation: Part I	144
§83. Review: place of the h₂e -conjugation in PIE. §84. The pre-PIE protomiddle. §85. The thematic type * bhér-e/o- . §86. h₂e -conjugation aorists: introduction. §87. Paradigms of PIE * doh₃- / * deh₃- , * logh- / * legh- . §88. Two groups of h₂e -conjugation aorist reflexes. §89. The Indo-Iranian passive aorist. §90. Stative-intransitive systems. §91. Root stative-intransitive presents. §92. Vedic-Tocharian correlations. §93. Tocharian class V subjunctives. §94. Stative-intransitive h₂e -conjugation aorists. §95. General treatment of stative-intransitive aorists. §96. Overview of stative-intransitive aorist reflexes. §97. The derivational pattern * bhóudh-e ⇒ * bhebhóudh-e . §98. The derivational pattern * bhóudh-e ⇒ * bhudh-ór . §99. Stative-intransitive aorists: summary.
7. Aorists of the h₂e -conjugation: Part II	174
§100. The 3 sg. pret. in - š . §101. Distribution of - s- in Hittite and Tocharian. §102. Secondary character of the classical s -aorist. §103. The PIE presigmatic aorist: active. §104. The presigmatic aorist middle. §105. The presigmatic aorist subjunctive. §106. Hitt. nešhut . §107. The presigmatic aorist optative. §108. Ved. ješam , jéšma , etc. §109. Protomiddle origin of the presigmatic aorist. §110. Transitive active and intransitive middle. §111. Replacement of * nóiH-e by * néiH-s-t . §112. Origin of sigmatic forms. §113. Spread of *- s- outside the active indicative. §114. Goals of a theory of the s -aorist. §115. The Hittite treatment of the presigmatic aorist. §116. The Tocharian treatment. §117. Presigmatic active > Tocharian class I subjunctive. §118. Presigmatic middle > Tocharian class III subjunctive. §119. Protomiddle-derived aorists: summary. §120. Inner IE innovations. §121. Indo-Iranian developments. §122. Greek developments. §123. Other h₂e -conjugation aorists in Hittite. §124. Tabular overview.
8. Retrospective	215
§125. The 'new look' of the PIE verb. §126. Summary of h₂e -conjugation present types. §127. Synchronic status of the h₂e -conjugation. §128. Patterning of stative-intransitive aorists. §129. Presigmatic aorists. §130. Topics for further study. §131. Attractiveness of the h₂e -conjugation framework.
Appendix 1: The Prehistory of the Thematic Conjugation	224
Appendix 2: The Perfect * uóid-e	228
References	234
Index	247