

CONTENTS

Preface	xi
Acknowledgements	xiii

PART I THE MARKETING REVOLUTION

1 Marketing's challenge	3
Summary	3
More sophisticated and demanding customers	3
Changes in product management	4
The 'virtualisation' of distribution channels	6
The 'virtualisation' of payments	8
The increasing globalisation of markets	10
Marketing's mid-life crisis	11
Case study	12
Assignment questions	13
References	13
2 The arrival of the digital age	14
Summary	14
The digital revolution	14
Government and the information society	15
Business and eCommerce	17
The implications for businesses	20
Case study	22
Assignment questions	24
References	24
3 How can marketing respond?	25
Summary	25
A new marketing model for the digital age	25
The marketing potential of the Internet	27
Marketing tips and pitfalls	30
The arrival of digital television and interactive services	31

Case study	34
Assignment questions	35
References	36

PART II GETTING TO KNOW THE CUSTOMER

4 Conducting marketing research	39
Summary	39
The use of IT in primary data collection	39
The use of IT in secondary data collection	43
Using IT to analyse information	46
Continuous marketing research	48
Advertising research	51
Other research applications	53
Assignment questions	54
References	54
5 Creating customer insight	55
Summary	55
Increasing sophistication of customer segmentation	55
Using new approaches to customer segmentation	58
Warehousing customer data	60
Mining customer data	64
Creating a knowledge organisation	66
Case study	69
Assignment questions	70
References	70

PART III MANAGING THE CUSTOMER RELATIONSHIP

6 Creating the customer database	75
Summary	75
Marketing information systems	75
The central role of the customer database	77
Developing the customer database	80
Treating the customer database as a strategic resource	83
Case study	84
Assignment questions	85
References	85

7 Database marketing and direct marketing	87
Summary	87
The evolution of database marketing	87
The value of database marketing	88
Direct marketing	92
Managing data privacy issues in the digital age	94
Assignment questions	97
References	97
 8 Relationship marketing	98
Summary	98
The rise of relationship marketing	98
Customer relationship management	102
The role of IT in relationship marketing	105
Case study	106
Assignment questions	108
References	108
 PART IV DEVELOPING THE CUSTOMER OFFERING
 9 Product – more variety, faster	111
Summary	111
Using IT to improve the range of viable offerings	111
Using IT to increase speed to market	115
Using IT to support the product development life cycle	116
Using advanced manufacturing techniques in product commercialisation	118
Case study	121
Assignment questions	123
References	123
 10 Price – what are you prepared to pay?	124
Summary	124
E-business is rewriting the pricing rules	124
Establishing accurate costs	128
Making well-informed and rapid pricing decisions	129
Case study	132
Assignment questions	133
References	134

11 Place – your place or mine?	135
Summary	135
The increasing importance of direct channels	135
Indirect channel changes	140
Managing multiple distribution channels	142
Case study	143
Assignment questions	144
References	145

12 Promotion – the market of one	146
Summary	146
Fragmentation of television advertising	146
Trends in other advertising media	150
The increasingly targeted nature of sales promotions	154
The growth of the Internet as an advertising medium	156
The potential of digital television and radio	158
Growth of public relations on the Internet	162
Case study	163
Assignment questions	164
References	164

PART V DELIVERING THE OFFERING TO THE CUSTOMER

13 Improving sales force effectiveness	169
Summary	169
The impact of the digital age on the sales function	169
The three generations of sales force automation	173
Successful technology-enabled selling	175
Case study	178
Assignment questions	180
References	180
14 Delivering customer service and support	181
Summary	181
Growth in telephone-based customer service	181
Call centre technology	183
Principles of good call centre management	186
Case study	187
Assignment questions	189
References	189

15 Developing marketing systems that work	190
Summary	190
Common management issues with IT	190
Specific problems with IT in marketing	193
IT trends in the digital age	194
A potential way forward	197
Case study	200
Assignment questions	202
References	202
 Index	 203