
Contents

PREFACE xv

PART I INTRODUCTION

Chapter 1 Buyer Behavior: The Core of Marketing 1

- 1.1 Introduction 1
- 1.2 Purpose of the Text 2
- 1.3 Consumer Behavior Theory 3
 - 1.3.1 Nature of Consumer Behavior Theory 3
 - 1.3.2 Source of Consumer Behavior Theory 3
 - 1.3.3 Consumer Behavior and Marketing Strategy 5
- 1.4 Summary of This Book and How to Use the Text 6
 - Questions 8

Chapter 2 Foundations of Consumer Behavior 10

- 2.1 Consumer Behavior: An Example 10
- 2.2 Product Category 11
 - 2.2.1 Introduction 11
 - 2.2.2 Example of Product Category 12
 - 2.2.3 Within-Category Relations 12
 - 2.2.4 Variability of Product Categories 12
 - 2.2.5 Relationships Between Categories 13
 - 2.2.6 Summary of Product Categories 14

2.3	Product Life Cycle	14
2.3.1	Introduction	14
2.3.2	An Example of Product Life Cycle	15
2.3.3	Consumers Adapt to Product Life Cycle	17
2.3.4	Digression on Product Familiarity and Information Processing	22
2.3.5	Clarification of Complications	25
2.3.6	Summary of Product Life Cycle	27
2.4	Market	28
2.5	Market Segmentation	29
2.6	Conclusions	29
	Questions	30

Chapter 3 A Basic Tool: The Consumer Decision Model 31

3.1	Introduction to Consumer Decision Model	31
3.2	Development of Consumer Decision Model	31
3.3	Overview of Consumer Decision Model	33
3.4	Consumer Decision Model	35
3.4.1	Introduction	35
3.4.2	Information	35
3.4.3	Brand Recognition	36
3.4.4	Attitude	38
3.4.5	Confidence in Judgment	40
3.4.6	Intention	41
3.4.7	Purchase	41
3.5	Applying the CDM	42
3.5.1	Introduction	42
3.5.2	Using the CDM Qualitatively	42
3.5.3	Using the CDM Quantitatively	43
3.5.4	Prediction	45
3.6	Extensions of the CDM	46
3.7	Conclusions	48
	Questions	49
	Appendix 3A: Conceptualization and Measurement of the CDM	49
	Appendix 3B: Market Response Modeling with the CDM	53

PART II FOUNDATIONS OF THE CONSUMER DECISION MODEL

Chapter 4 Foundations of Information-Processing Theory 57

4.1	Introduction	57
4.2	Processing Capacity	61
4.3	Motivation	61

4.4	Attention and Perceptual Encoding	62
4.5	Information Acquisition and Evaluation	63
4.6	Use of Memory	63
4.7	Decision Rules and Processes	66
4.8	Effects of Consumption and Learning	66
4.9	Conclusions	67
	Questions	67

Chapter 5 Theory for Extensive Problem Solving 69

5.1	Introduction	69
5.2	Product Hierarchy	71
5.2.1	Introduction	71
5.2.2	Relevance of Product Hierarchy	73
5.2.3	Measurement of Product Hierarchy	74
5.3	Language	76
5.3.1	Introduction	76
5.3.2	Practical Knowledge	77
5.3.3	Lexical or Word Knowledge	78
5.3.4	Additional Complications	81
5.3.5	Summary of Language	83
5.4	Driving Forces	84
5.4.1	Introduction	84
5.4.2	Long-Term Driving Forces	84
5.4.3	Short-Term Driving Forces	88
5.5	Information Processing	88
5.5.1	Introduction	88
5.5.2	Search	88
5.5.3	Attention	90
5.5.4	Memory	91
5.5.5	Choice	92
5.5.6	Conclusions on Information Processing	93
5.6	Conclusions on Theory for EPS	93
	Questions	94

Chapter 6 Theory for Limited Problem Solving 96

6.1	Introduction	96
6.2	Product Hierarchy: A Brand Level View	97
6.2.1	Introduction	97
6.2.2	Measurement of Brand Similarities	97
6.3	Brand Competitive Relations	99
6.4	General Information Effect	101
6.4.1	Introduction	101
6.4.2	Cognitive Response	101

6.4.3	Product Hierarchy Control of Four Subprocesses	102
6.4.4	Relations to CDM	104
6.5	Search	108
6.5.1	Introduction	108
6.5.2	Motivation	110
6.5.3	Scanner and Interrupt Mechanisms	111
6.5.4	Internal Versus External Search	112
6.6	Attention	114
6.6.1	Introduction	114
6.6.2	Voluntary Attention	115
6.6.3	Involuntary Attention	116
6.7	Memory	116
6.7.1	Introduction	116
6.7.2	Working Memory	117
6.7.3	Long-Term Memory	117
6.7.4	Buyer Memory Tasks	120
6.7.5	Conclusions on Memory	121
6.8	Purchase	122
6.8.1	Introduction	122
6.8.2	Intention to Buy	123
6.8.3	Purchase Behavior	124
6.9	Conclusions	125
6.10	Summary	126
	Questions	127

Chapter 7 Theory for Routine Problem Solving 128

7.1	Introduction	128
7.2	Brand Loyalty	129
7.3	Dynamics of Routine Buying	133
7.3.1	Introduction	133
7.3.2	Evidence for Cyclic Behavior	135
7.4	Theory of Routine Buying	138
7.4.1	Introduction	138
7.4.2	Direct or Bypassing Effect	138
7.4.3	Explanation of Cyclic Behavior	143
7.4.4	Motivational Bases of Routine Buying	146
7.5	Routine Buying and the General Theory	157
7.6	Conclusions	159
	Questions	161

Chapter 8 Extending the General Theory 162

8.1	Introduction of the Extensions	162
8.2	Satisfaction	162

8.2.1	Introduction to Satisfaction	162
8.2.2	Measurement of Satisfaction	163
8.2.3	Broader Picture of Satisfaction	164
8.2.4	Motives and Satisfaction	164
8.2.5	Company Concern about Satisfaction	165
8.2.6	Summary of Satisfaction	167
8.3	Two Additional Feedbacks	167
8.3.1	Introduction to Feedbacks	167
8.3.2	Feedback from Confidence to Search and Attention	167
8.3.3	Feedback from Attitude to Search and Attention	169
8.3.4	Conclusions on the Two Feedbacks	170
8.4	Nonlinear and Interactive Relations	171
8.4.1	Introduction to Nonlinear and Interactive Relations	171
8.4.2	Nonlinear Relations	171
8.4.3	Interactive Relations	172
8.4.4	Conclusions on Nonlinearities and Interactions	174
8.5	Means-End Analysis	175
8.5.1	Introduction to Means-End Analysis	175
8.5.2	Concept of the Means-End Chain	175
8.5.3	Application of Means-End	177
8.5.4	Means-End and the CDM	178
8.5.5	Conclusions on Means-End Analysis	181
8.6	Conclusions on Extending the General Theory	182
	Questions	183

Chapter 9 Market Segmentation 184

9.1	Introduction to Market Segmentation	184
9.2	Two Basic Concepts of Market Segmentation	184
9.2.1	Introduction to the Two Basic Concepts	184
9.2.2	Segment Bases	187
9.2.3	Segment Descriptors	189
9.2.4	Conclusion on the Market Segment	191
9.3	Applications of Segmentation	191
9.3.1	Introduction to Application of Segmentation	191
9.3.2	Two Key Elements of Marketing Strategy	192
9.4	Family Influence on Buying	192
9.4.1	Introduction to Family Influence	192
9.4.2	Definition of Family	193
9.5	Social Class	199
9.5.1	Introduction to Social Class	199
9.5.2	Definition and Measurement of Social Class	199
9.5.3	Social Class and Motivation	200
9.5.4	Implications for Marketing	200

9.5.5	Conclusions on Social Class	201
9.6	Culture	202
9.6.1	Introduction to Culture	202
9.6.2	Example of Culture	202
9.6.3	Conclusion on Culture	203
9.7	Reference Groups	204
9.7.1	Introduction to Reference Groups	204
9.7.2	Nature of Reference Groups	204
9.7.3	Marketing Implications of Reference Groups	208
9.7.4	Conclusions on Reference Groups	210
9.8	Conclusions on Market Segmentation	210
	Questions	211

PART III STRATEGIC APPLICATIONS

Chapter 10 Strategy for Introductory Stage 212

10.1	Introduction	212
10.2	An Introductory Product: The Volkswagen Story	216
10.3	Strategy	220
10.3.1	Introduction	220
10.3.2	Strategy for Product Category	221
10.3.3	Early Diffusion Studies	226
10.3.4	Summary of Strategy	229
10.4	Product Design	230
10.5	Pricing	233
10.6	Communication	234
10.6.1	Introduction	234
10.6.2	Copy	236
10.7	Distribution	243
10.7.1	Introduction	243
10.7.2	Use of Specialty Stores	244
10.8	Consumer Satisfaction	245
10.9	Summary	246
	Questions	247
	Applications	248

Chapter 11 Strategy for Growth Stage 249

11.1	Introduction	249
11.2	A Growth Product: The Home Depot	249
11.3	Strategy	256
11.3.1	Brand Strategy	256

11.3.2	Summary of Brand Strategy	258
11.4	Product Design	259
11.4.1	Introduction	259
11.4.2	Importance of Product Design	259
11.4.3	Physical Product Versus a Service	260
11.4.4	Elements of Product Design	261
11.5	Pricing	267
11.6	Communication	269
11.6.1	Introduction	269
11.6.2	Advertising	269
11.6.3	Personal Selling	277
11.7	Distributing to Your Market	280
11.7.1	Introduction	280
11.7.2	Consumer Selects Store	281
11.7.3	Types of Stores Patronized	283
11.8	Consumer Satisfaction	286
11.9	Summary	287
	Questions	288
	Applications	288

Chapter 12 Strategy for Mature Markets 290

12.1	Introduction	290
12.2	Consumer Behavior in a Mature Market	292
12.2.1	Introduction	292
12.2.2	Dutch Study	293
12.2.3	Implications for Practice	293
12.3	Strategy and Plans for a Mature Market	297
12.3.1	Mature Product: Borden's Eagle Brand	297
12.3.2	Marketing Mix for Mature Market	302
12.4	Consumer Satisfaction	324
12.5	Conclusions on Strategy for Mature Market	325
	Questions	326
	Applications	327

Chapter 13 Strategy for Declining Markets 328

13.1	Introduction	328
13.2	Strategy for Declining Markets Generally	329
13.2.1	Introduction	329
13.2.2	Consumers	332
13.2.3	Competition	333
13.2.4	Conclusions on Strategy for Declining Markets Generally	335
13.3	Consumer Satisfaction	335
13.4	Strategy for Nostalgia-Prone Consumers	336

13.4.1	Introduction	336
13.4.2	Declining Product: Morgan Car	337
13.4.3	Evidence on Nostalgia	340
13.4.4	Relevance of Nostalgia for Marketing	342
13.4.5	Additional Information on Nostalgia	345
13.4.6	Conclusions on Nostalgia-Prone Consumers	346
	Questions	346
	Applications	347
	Nostalgia Proneness and Consumer Tastes	348
	Morris B. Holbrook

Chapter 14 Market Entry 365

14.1	Introduction	365
14.2	Instant Coffee Life Cycle	368
14.2.1	Introduction	368
14.2.2	Haire Study, 1944	368
14.2.3	Webster-von Pechman Study	371
14.3	Simulated Test Marketing	373
14.3.1	Introduction	373
14.4	Strategic Market Entry Using the CDM	374
14.4.1	Introduction	374
14.4.2	Brand Equity Elements and the CDM	375
14.4.3	Conclusions on Brand Equity	380
14.5	Market Entry for Industrial Marketing	380
14.5.1	Introduction	380
14.5.2	General Electric's Factory Automation	380
14.5.3	Emery Air Freight Case	383
14.5.4	Conclusions on Organizational Buying	390
14.5.5	Application of Brand Equity	391
14.6	Applications of Metaanalyses	393
14.6.1	Introduction	393
14.6.2	Metaanalysis in Marketing	394
14.6.3	Illustrative Hypothetical Example	395
14.6.4	Summary of Metaanalysis	396
14.7	Organizational Influences	396
14.7.1	Introduction	396
14.7.2	Changing Role of Marketing in the Company	396
14.7.3	Changing Nature of Organization	397
14.7.4	Application of Organizational Concepts	398
14.7.5	Conclusions on Organization Influences	400
14.8	Conclusions on Market Entry	400

Questions	402
Applications	402

Chapter 15 Social Marketing and Public Policy for Marketing 403

15.1	Introduction	403
15.2	Social Marketing	405
15.2.1	Introduction	405
15.2.2	Conclusions on Social Marketing	408
15.3	Public Policy for Marketing	411
15.3.1	Introduction	411
15.3.2	Food and Drug Administration	413
15.3.3	Federal Trade Commission	416
15.3.4	U.S. Department of Justice	419
15.3.5	Government Agency Influence	419
15.3.6	International Implications	420
15.3.7	State Guidelines for Marketing	420
15.3.8	Mounting Legal Activity	421
15.4	Implications of Social Marketing and Public Policy	421
15.5	Ethical Responsibilities of Marketers	422
15.5.1	Introduction	422
15.5.2	Example of Ethical Responsibility	423
15.5.3	Body of Principles	424
15.5.4	Conclusions on Ethical Responsibility	428
	Questions	429
	Applications	429

PART IV COMPUTER APPLICATIONS OF THE CONSUMER DECISION MODEL

Chapter 16 Review of Regression: Computer Applications for Buyer Behavior in Marketing Strategy 431

16.1	Introduction	431
16.2	Dependent and Independent Variables	431
16.2.1	Types of Relationships	431
16.2.2	Scatter Diagrams	432
16.2.3	Correlation Coefficient	434
16.3	Regression	435
16.3.1	Regression Model	435
16.3.2	Interpretation of b_0 and b_1	436
16.3.3	Prediction	437
16.3.4	Multiple Regression	438

Chapter 17	Quick 'n Easy I (Revised): Computer Applications for Buyer Behavior in Marketing Strategy	440
	John Stephan and John A. Howard
Chapter 18	Quick 'n Easy II: Computer Mechanics	480
	John A. Howard and John Stephan
Chapter 19	Determining Nonlinear and Interactive Relationships	508
	Margaret Berry Levy with Patricia Ritsick and Michael Augustine
Chapter 20	RCA Videodisk Case and Questionnaire	529
Chapter 21	Lean Strips Case and Questionnaire	535
Chapter 22	Vega Case and Questionnaire	548
Chapter 23	Financial Services Accounts Case and Questionnaire	563
GLOSSARY	583
INDEX	593	