

Contents

List of figures and tables	ix
Preface	x
 Part I Battered women: private struggles against a public problem
1 Reconciling the personal and political through collaborative research	3
2 Battered women: what life experience reveals	16
3 Women in violent relationships: why they stayed	32
4 From victim to survivor: how they left	56
 Part II Battered women and their social networks
5 Social network members' responses to battered women	81
6 The women's interaction with formal network members	100
7 Social network members' values	116
 Part III Social life without violence: struggles and visions
8 The shelter experience	147

Contents

9 Rites of passage to a life without violence	166
10 After shelter: poor and homeless women and children	184
11 The children and work of battered women	203
 Part IV Conclusions, implications, follow-up
12 Summary and conclusions	229
Epilogue Five years later	237
Appendix Theoretical and methodological issues	243
Notes	256
References	269
Name index	282
Subject index	286

Figures and tables

Figures

3.1 A battered woman's drawing signifying her broken heart	50
4.1 Interactive relationship between stress and crisis and possible illness in a battering situation	70
4.2 Natural and formal crisis management during a battering episode	74
4.3 Crisis process: crisis origins, manifestations, outcomes, and the respective functions of crisis management	76

Tables

1.1 Concepts, assumptions, and practice implications related to labelling theory	244
1.2 Schematic representation of conceptual framework of this research	245