

Contents

Acknowledgements	xiii
List of tables	xv
List of figures	xvii
List of abbreviations	xviii
List of Siswati words and terms	xix
1. Introduction
1.1. Social security research and development thinking	1
1.2. The plan of this study	5
2. Research problem and methodology
2.1. Introduction	7
2.2. Conventional understanding of social security	8
2.3. Critics on the conventional definitions	10
2.4. A different view of the concept of social security	14
2.5. What this study is about	16
2.5.1. Object of the study	16
2.5.2. Research problem and research questions	19
2.6. Methodological considerations	21
2.6.1. Theoretical background	21
2.6.2. Data collection	26
3. The function and place of social security mechanisms in society
3.1. Introduction	31
3.2. The standard of living of the individual	32
3.2.1. The definition of the standard of living	32
3.2.2. Sen's entitlement approach	34
3.2.3. Entitlements, capabilities and uncertainties	37
3.3. The function of social security mechanisms	41
3.4. Social security mechanisms and society	44
3.4.1. Social security mechanisms as part of the economy	44
3.4.2. Social security mechanisms and society	49

3.5.	Social security mechanisms and change	54
3.6.	A brief overview	60
4.	Types of social security mechanisms
4.1.	Introduction	65
4.2.	Classification of social security mechanisms	66
4.3.	Social security mechanisms and reciprocity	67
4.3.1.	The rural family	69
4.3.2.	The rural family as solidarity group	72
4.3.3.	Social networks as social security mechanisms	86
4.3.4.	Kinship relations and social security	88
4.3.5.	Social relationships with neighbours and friends	91
4.3.6.	Associations as social security mechanisms	92
4.4.	Redistribution and social security mechanisms	97
4.4.1.	Older centres of redistribution	98
4.4.2.	Statel and parastatal social security mechanisms	99
4.5.	Market exchange and social security mechanisms	101
5.	Profile of Swaziland
5.1.	Introduction	103
5.2.	The precolonial period	103
5.3.	The colonial period	107
5.3.1.	The pre-1945 period	107
5.3.2.	The post-1945 period	108
5.4.	The post-independence period	109
5.4.1.	Political context	109
5.4.2.	Economic development	110
5.4.3.	Distribution and social development	113
6.	The Swazi rural homestead as solidarity group
6.1.	Introduction	119
6.2.	Views on the Swazi rural homestead	120
6.2.1.	The ethnographic or classic homestead model	120
6.2.2.	The orthodox view: the homestead development cycle	125
6.2.3.	The radical view: semi-proletarians and homestead classes	127
6.2.4.	Using the homestead models	131
6.3.	The economic position of the rural homestead	132
6.3.1.	Analysis at homestead level	132
6.3.2.	Socio-economic differentiation within homesteads	143

6.4.	The size of the homestead	149
6.5.	The composition of homesteads	156
6.6.	The durability of the homestead	166
6.7.	The homestead and Swazi morality	170
7.	Kinship relations as social security mechanisms
7.1.	Introduction	177
7.2.	General characteristics of the Swazi kinship system	178
7.3.	Kin relations among siblings	181
7.3.1.	Normative behaviour among siblings	181
7.3.2.	Exchange among siblings in figures	182
7.3.3.	Exchange of male respondents with full brothers	187
7.3.4.	Exchange of male respondents with half brothers	188
7.3.5.	Exchange of male respondents with full sisters	188
7.3.6.	Exchange of male respondents with half sisters	190
7.3.7.	Exchange of female respondents with full brothers	190
7.3.8.	Exchange of female respondents with half brothers	191
7.3.9.	Exchange of female respondents with full sisters	191
7.3.10.	Exchange of female respondents with half sisters	192
7.4.	Paternal kin relations	192
7.4.1.	Normative behaviour with paternal kin	192
7.4.2.	Exchange of male respondents with cousins	200
7.4.3.	Exchange of male respondents with father's brothers and sisters	200
7.4.4.	Exchange of male respondents with brothers' and sisters' children	201
7.4.5.	Exchange of female respondents with paternal cousins	202
7.4.6.	Exchange of female respondents with father's brothers and sisters	203
7.4.7.	Exchange of female respondents with father's brothers and sisters	203
7.5.	Maternal kin relations	204
7.5.1.	Normative behaviour with maternal kin relations	204
7.5.2.	Exchange of male respondents with maternal cousins	204
7.5.3.	Exchange of male respondents with mother's brothers and sisters	210
7.5.4.	The exchange of female respondents with maternal cousins	210
7.5.5.	The exchange of female respondents with mother's brothers and sisters	211

7.6.	Affinal kin relations	211
7.6.1.	Normative behaviour towards in-laws	211
7.6.2.	The exchange relations of female respondents with in-laws	213
7.6.3.	Exchange relations of male respondents with in-laws	215
7.7.	An evaluation of kinship relations as social security mechanism	216
8.	Swazi social security mechanisms: neighbourhood, associations and chiefdoms
8.1.	Introduction	221
8.2.	Neighbour relations	221
8.3.	Associations	224
8.3.1.	Defensive associations	224
8.3.2.	Active diffuse associations	230
8.3.3.	Active focused associations: religious and ritual	230
8.3.4.	Active focused associations: economic	234
8.4.	The chiefdom	251
9.	Social security mechanisms and the individual Swazi
9.1.	Introduction	263
9.2.	The individual and rural social security mechanisms	264
9.3.	Social security provision in the case of old age	273
9.3.1.	Law and old age	273
9.3.2.	How the elderly survive	274
9.3.3.	Support from the children	276
9.3.4.	The elderly and monetary income	285
9.3.5.	Other sources of subsistence	289
9.4.	Social security provisions in the event of illness	294
9.4.1.	Who should provide which social security resources?	294
9.4.2.	Help with illness in practice	295
9.5.	Social security provisions in the case of death of homestead members	299
9.5.1.	Norms and rules in the case of death of homestead members	299
9.5.2.	Support received at the death of homestead members	300
9.6.	Some concluding notes	305

10.	Summary, conclusions and options for further research
10.1.	Introduction	307
10.2.	Summary and methodological evaluation	307
10.2.1.	Summary and conclusions	307
10.2.2.	Some methodological reflections	314
10.3.	Limitations of the analysis	315
10.4.	Options for further research	317
	References	321
	Appendices	337
	Name index	431
	Subject index	433
	Summary in Dutch (Nederlandse samenvatting)	437