

Contents

1	Introduction	7
1.1	The Framework and a First Formalization	7
1.1.1	The Framework	7
1.1.2	A First Formalization	10
1.2	Hotelling and Spatial Competition	14
1.3	Lancaster	18
1.3.1	Lancaster and Non-Combinable Goods	18
1.3.2	A Lancasterian Model of Variable Demand	19
1.3.3	A Lancasterian Model of Unit Demand	21
1.4	Chamberlin	25
1.5	General Equilibrium	28
1.6	Models and ‘Facts’	31
2	Demand Aggregation	35
2.1	Motivation	35
2.2	Individual Demand	37
2.2.1	Unit Demand	37
2.2.2	Variable Demand	43
2.3	Aggregate Demand	45
2.3.1	Two Examples	45
2.3.2	Prékopa and Borell	46
2.3.3	Aggregation of Unit Demand	49
2.3.4	The Aggregation Approach of Grandmont	49
3	Price Competition	55
3.1	Overview	55
3.2	The Circular Road Revisited	59

3.2.1	Introduction	59
3.2.2	The Model	59
3.2.3	Results with Quadratic Transportation Costs . .	60
3.2.4	Results with Generalized Transportation Costs . .	62
3.3	Duopoly Equilibrium	70
3.3.1	Introduction	70
3.3.2	Behavior of Customers and Firms	71
3.3.3	Unit Elastic Demand	75
3.3.4	Heterogeneity and Paramatrization of Demand Behavior	82
3.3.5	Beyond Unit Elastic Demand	88
3.3.6	Conclusion	93
3.4	Oligopoly Equilibrium	94
3.4.1	Introduction	94
3.4.2	The Model	95
3.4.3	Existence and Uniqueness	101
3.4.4	Comparative Statics	109
3.4.5	Learning	113
3.4.6	Conclusion	120
3.5	Appendix	121
3.5.1	The Theory of Quasi-Supermodular Games and Learning in Normal Form Games	121
3.5.2	Appendix to Section 3.3	127
3.5.3	Appendix to Section 3.4	135
4	Product Design	139
4.1	Overview	139
4.2	Entry, Exit, and Quality Competition	144
4.2.1	Introduction	144
4.2.2	Main Results	147
4.2.3	The Model	150
4.2.4	Entry in the Middle	156
4.2.5	Entry Deterrence	159
4.2.6	Comparative Statics	167
4.2.7	Conclusion	168
4.3	The Differentiation Triangle	170
4.3.1	Introduction	170

4.3.2	The Model	174
4.3.3	Results in the Model of the Triangle	180
4.3.4	Related Models	198
4.3.5	Conclusion	205
5	References	207
5.1	References for Chapter 1	207
5.2	References for Chapter 2	211
5.3	References for Chapter 3	213
5.4	References for Chapter 4	216