

Contents

|                                                      |    |
|------------------------------------------------------|----|
| Acknowledgments                                      | ix |
| Introduction                                         | x  |
| 1. World Communication: A History and Interpretation | 1  |
| The Growth of International Communication            | 3  |
| Centers of International Communication Research      | 6  |
| Follow-Up to MIT Project: Political                  |    |
| Communication Research                               | 19 |
| First-Generation Communication Researchers           | 31 |
| Formalization of International Communication Studies | 35 |
| Beyond the Cold War                                  | 37 |
| 2. Technology and Society                            | 39 |
| National Systems and Policies: The Privacy           |    |
| of Information and "Information" Sovereignty         | 39 |
| Technology Versus Tradition in Old Societies         | 45 |
| Telecommunications and the Emerging                  |    |
| International Regime                                 | 54 |
| Application of Technology in Development             | 58 |
| Technology and the Ongoing Communication Revolution  | 69 |
| 3. Communication and Power                           | 71 |
| Power as an Integrated Whole                         | 72 |
| Intangible Resources of Power and Their Allocations  | 76 |
| Geopolitical and Strategic Power and                 |    |
| the Persian Gulf Region                              | 81 |
| Conclusion                                           | 88 |
| 4. The Making of Community                           | 90 |
| What Is Community?                                   | 90 |
| Community and National and Global Development        | 91 |
| The Media as a Forum for Community Building          | 92 |
| Community Through Dialogue                           | 96 |

|                                                    |     |
|----------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Community and World Order                          | 98  |
| 5. Language and International Communication        | 103 |
| Invisibility                                       | 104 |
| Nationalism and Regionalism: Language-Based        |     |
| Regional Broadcasters in Europe                    | 107 |
| International Security and Conflict:               |     |
| International Radio Broadcasters                   | 107 |
| International Commerce and Trade: Language Quotas  | 108 |
| 6. The Remaking of Community: The Case of Islam    | 113 |
| The Islamic World                                  | 114 |
| Civil Society and Information Society:             |     |
| A Quest for Community                              | 127 |
| Ultimate Objective of Community Building           | 130 |
| The Information Society Paradigm                   | 131 |
| The Islamic Community Paradigm                     | 132 |
| Dark Surprises or Lights of Hope                   | 144 |
| 7. The Future of the State: An Islamic Perspective | 147 |
| Islamic Concept of the State and Community         | 148 |
| The Meaning of Communication                       | 149 |
| Separation of the State and Community              | 150 |
| Communication, Colonialism, and the State          | 152 |
| Islamic Reform Movements                           | 153 |
| Crisis of Legitimacy: The Case of Iran             | 158 |
| From Nationalism to the Islamic Revolution         | 164 |
| Communication and the State in an Islamic Context  | 167 |
| The Role of the Mass Media: Radio and Television   | 169 |
| Dualism of the State: The Challenges Ahead         | 171 |
| 8. Communication as Cultural Ecology               | 176 |
| Transformation in International Relations          | 178 |
| Communication and Culture and the Quest            |     |
| for a New World Order                              | 179 |
| The Ecological Dimensions of International         |     |
| Relations and Global Communication                 | 185 |
| 9. Shapes of the Future: International             |     |
| Communication in the 21st Century                  | 193 |
| 1. The Move Toward Global Communication            | 194 |

|                                                             |     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 2. Global Communication Is Not UniversalCommunication   | 195 |
| 3. Conflicts Revolve Around Culturesand Civilizations   | 199 |
| 4. Nationalism Versus Universalism                          | 201 |
| 5. Move Toward Economic andTechnological Regionalism    | 203 |
| 6. Nation-States and Ghetto States                          | 204 |
| 7. The Erosion of Nation-State Sovereignty                  | 206 |
| 8. The (Re-)Emergence of the Paradigm ofDominance       | 207 |
| 9. The Need for Epistemological Reorientation               | 208 |
| 10. Reconsidering Categories andMethodological Concepts | 211 |
| References                                                  | 214 |
| Author Index                                                | 220 |
| Subject Index                                               | 222 |
| About the Author                                            | 233 |