

Contents

Preface vii

Introduction: Setting the Limits ix

Part 1. The Weimar Cinema 1

1. Specular Presence and Historical Revolution:
Ernst Lubitsch's Passion 3
2. The Modernist Camera and Cinema Illusion:
Friedrich Wilhelm Murnau's The Last Laugh 19
3. The Rhetoric of the Image: Slatan Dudov and
Bertolt Brecht's Kuhle Wampe or Who Owns the World? 34

Part 2. The Cinema of the Third Reich 49

4. Probing the Limits: Detlef Sierck's To New Shores 51
5. The Fascist Discourse:
Eduard von Borsody's Request Concert 66
6. The Illusion of Escapism:
Helmut Käutner's Romance in a Minor Key 81

Part 3. The Early Postwar Cinema 97

7. The Discourse of Powerlessness:
Wolfgang Staudte's Rotation 99

8. The Return of the Familiar:
Hans Deppe's Black Forest Girl 114
9. Privatizing the Past:
Georg Wilhelm Pabst's The Last Ten Days 128

Part 4. The East German Cinema 143

10. The Authenticity of Autobiography:
Konrad Wolf's I Was Nineteen 145
11. Discipline and Gender:
Hermann Zschoche's On Probation 162

Part 5. The New German Cinema 179

12. Beyond Spectacle:
Alexander Kluge's Artists under the Big Top: Perplexed 181
13. The Subject of Identity:
Margarethe von Trotta's Marianne and Juliane 198
14. The Archaeology of the Present:
Wim Wenders's Paris, Texas 214

Conclusion 231

Appendix: Film Credits 235

Notes 249

Chapter Bibliographies 287

General Bibliography 299

Index 313