

Introduction	page iv
Section 1 Theoretical perspectives	1
1 Paradigm shift and the language teaching profession Tessa Woodward	4
2 Implications of a lexical view of language Michael Lewis	10
3 Second language acquisition research and task-based instruction Peter Skehan	17
4 What learners know and what they need to learn Terry Shortall	31
Section 2 Some classroom applications	42
5 Accuracy, fluency and conformity Dave Willis	44
6 A flexible framework for task-based learning Jane Willis	52
7 Consciousness-raising activities in the language classroom Dave Willis and Jane Willis	63
Section 3 Professional development and teacher training	77
8 ARC: a descriptive model for classroom work on language Jim Scrivener	79
9 Grammar for trainee teachers Philip Kerr	93
10 Learning to learn how to teach: developing expertise through experience Corony Edwards	99
Section 4 Investigating new approaches	108
11 Introducing innovations into your teaching Denise Özdeniz	110
12 Doing the task better: how planning time influences students' performance Pauline Foster	126
13 Effects of task repetition: appraising the developing language of learners Martin Bygate	136
Section 5 Assessing and managing change	147
14 Assessing the practice of teaching: a view from RSA/UCLES	149
15 Testing innovations Sue Wharton	155
16 Curriculum innovation, teamwork and the management of change Katie Jennings and Tom Doyle	169
References and bibliography	178
Index	184