

Table of Contents

List of Tables and Figure	xi
Acknowledgments	xiii
List of Abbreviations and Reference Conventions	xv
Introduction	1
Personal Development and Ecclesial Influences up to 386	2
Development from Conversion (386) to Ordination (391)	11
The Emergence of Augustine's Ecclesiology, 386–391	18
Literature: The Church and the Young Augustine	21
Methodological Considerations	25
Chapter I
Christianity and the Church in the Cassiciacum Dialogues	29
Introduction	29
Context: The Occasion of the Retreat	36
Life at the Villa	37
Christian Elements at Cassiciacum: Beliefs and Scriptures	41
Christian Teaching and Catechumenate	45
Religious Practice and True Philosophy	48
Conceptions of Community: Religious Practice and Hierarchy	52
Conclusions	57
Chapter II
Augustine's Exposure to the Church at Milan, 387	59
Introduction	59
The Return to Milan	63
The Story of Victorinus: A Recollection with New Meaning?	67
Evidence about the Church at Milan	79
Catechetical and Baptismal Instruction	83
Ambrose's Influence on Augustine's Nascent Ecclesiology, Part 1	90
At Cassiciacum: August 386–February 387	96
Back at Milan, 387	98
Chapter III
Developments Between Milan and the Return to Africa	105
Introduction	105

The Texts	109
First Ideas of the Church: Teacher, Mother, Catholic	115
Ambrose's Influence on Augustine's Nascent Ecclesiology, Part 2	129
Milan Revisited	130
Ambrose's Presentation and Interpretation of the Creed	131
Ambrose's Presentation and Interpretation of the Baptismal Rites	137
Ecclesial Elements in Ambrose's Sermons circa 387	145
The Ecclesial Atmosphere of the Church at Milan	147
Aside: Trinitarian Ties to Milan and De Moribus Ecclesiae Catholicae	157
The Religious Life and Asceticism	159
The Church Defined and Described	169
The Broader Ecclesiological Context	173
Conclusions and Summary of Developments at Milan and Rome	175

Chapter IV

Progress and Consolidation at Thagaste, 388–389	179
Introduction	179
Ecclesial Progress at Thagaste through 389	183
Texts and Chronology	186
From the Church as Teacher to Teaching in the Church	187
Religious Life	196
The Thagaste Community	206
Ecclesiological Exegesis	213
The Church as a Theological Object	217
Conclusion and Summary	226
Excursus: The 'Monastic' Nature of the Thagaste Community	227
'Serui Dei' and Augustine's Return to North Africa	231
Arguments for a Monastery at Thagaste, and Response	238

Chapter V

Ecclesiological Synthesis and 'Monastic' Direction, 390–391	245
Introduction	245
Texts and Chronology	246
Augustine's De Musica	247
The Christian Nature of De Musica	251
De Musica's Ecclesiological Significance	252
The Spiritual Framework of the Religious Life	253
A Shift in Augustine's View of Christian Community	264
The Religious Synthesis of 390	270
The Church: Universal Teacher, Hospital, and Ascetic Community	274

Universal Asceticism	276
Spiritual Healing and Training in the Church	279
Augustine as Teacher of the Catholic Religion	289
Christian Institution	294
Beliefs of and about the Church	299
Ecclesiology in Practice	307
Synthesis Leading to Resolved Action	313
Chapter VI
Conclusions and Future Direction	319
The Appearance and Development of Basic Ecclesial Aspects	320
The Process: From Emergence to Synthesis	324
Framework for Future Development	332
The Young Christian Augustine	336
Appendix A
Chronological Issues	339
Part 1: General Information and Chronological Table	339
Part 2: Dating the Cassiciacum Dialogues	341
Part 3: J.K. Coyle on De moribus ecclesiae catholicae	342
Part 4: Summary and Index of Chronological References	349
Appendix B
Word Studies of Augustine's Early Writings, 386–391	351
Introduction	351
Part 1: Tabulated Results	352
Part 2: Commentary	361
Appendix C
Augustine's Use of Scripture in 387–388	387
Part 1: Summary of Augustine's Use of Scripture, 387–388	387
Part 2: Scripture in De moribus ecclesiae catholicae	392
Bibliography	397
Indexes
Modern Authors	407
References to Scripture	413
Ambrose's and Augustine's Writings	417
People and Places	427
Topical	437