

Contents

Foreword to the third edition	viii
Preface to the third edition	x
About the author	xii
1 Know the game	1
The process of writing	1
The scientific article as truth	3
The truth about scientific articles	6
Marketing – a vulgar but comforting approach	8
Implications for the reader of this book	9
Bookchoice	9
2 Know yourself	11
Do you really want to write?	11
Goals – and can you achieve them?	13
Making time	13
Setting objectives	15
3 First set yourself a brief	17
When to stop researching and start writing	17
Only one message per article	20
Choose the market	23
Decide on the length	27
Agree the deadlines	27
Agree on the co-authors	29

4 Expand the brief	33
Gather your strength	33
Sort it out	34
Expand the spidergram	35
Bookchoice	38
5 Make a plan, or four	41
Understanding structure 1: the paragraph	41
Understanding structure 2: the scientific paper	43
Writing the plan	49
6 Write the first draft	51
Conquer the fear of writing . . .	51
Get ready to write	52
Go with the flow	53
Write each section in turn	55
Overcome writer's block	55
Bookchoice	56
7 Rewrite your draft	57
Now comes the pain . . .	57
Macroediting	58
Microediting	64
Bookchoice	72
8 Prepare the additional elements	75
The title page	75
The abstract	81
References	84
Tables	85
Letter to the editor	87
Bookchoice	91

9 Use internal reviewers	93
‘Hit me again . . . and again . . .’	93
Voluntary reviewing	95
Compulsory reviewing	97
Bookchoice	98
10 Send off the package	99
At last . . .	99
. . . into the black hole	100
Coping with rejection	101
Coping with acceptance	103
After publication	104
References	105
Index	107