

CONTENTS

CHAPTER I. THE NEW MONARCHY

The Renaissance not an event but a process	1
Rebellion of the facts against the theories	2
Medieval theories	3
An active spirit of criticism	4
The Prince of the new monarchy	5
The new monarchy not a breach in constitutional development	6
Contemporaries unconscious of any remarkable change	7
The importance of the Battle of Bosworth	8
The decision, though not the end, of a futile civil war	10
The prestige of the Crown survived the internecine struggle	12
Decline of the nobility	13
Unstable basis of baronial power: lack of money	15
Lavish expenditure of the fifth earl of Northumberland	17
A shaken morality	18
The position of the Church: the appearance of strength	19
Understanding between Crown and Papacy	20
Power of the Church sapped by indifference	21
Public apathy gave opportunity for a competent king	22
The Tudor brought no theory; his success a triumph of fact	23

CHAPTER II. THE FACE OF ENGLAND

'Descriptions' borrowed from Higden's Polychronicon	25
England as seen by foreigners: Erasmus	26
Polydore Vergil	27
Polydore's description of England	28
The Italian Relation : a description by a Venetian	30
Descriptions by Englishmen: John Leland	32
His professed purpose to rescue English manuscripts	32
His suspicion of Polydore and of German 'collectors'	33
His detailed survey of much of England	34
The English forests	34
Communications: roads and bridges	35
Champaign farming and mineral wealth	36
Few scars left by the Civil War	37
Decay of the castles	38
The contribution of the church to building	39
Country towns and ports	40
London	41
London Bridge	42
The city and its buildings	43
The suburbs and the fields: Westminster	44

CHAPTER III. THE NEW KING AND HIS RIVALS

The 'three several titles' enumerated by Bacon	46
The origin of the Tudors	47
Vicissitudes of Henry's youth	48
Dissensions amongst the Yorkists	49
Richard's measures compel Henry to make the venture	50
Henry's assets	51
Yorkist defections at Bosworth, 22 August 1485	53
Henry enters London as King, 3 September 1485	54
Magnificence of the coronation, 30 October 1485	55
The king's councillors and ministers	56
Promotion of his friends to minor offices	57
The new government popular	58
Henry's first parliament, 7 November 1485	59
The royal title vindicated	60
Attaint of the king's enemies: lenience in execution	62
Oath to preserve peace	63
The royal finances set in order	64
Economic measures: a 'navigation act'	65
Henry's marriage with Elizabeth, 18 January 1486	65
Henry recognized by Rome	66
Dangers at home and abroad: Lovell and the Staffords, 1486	67
Lambert Simnel	68
Defection of John de la Pole, Earl of Lincoln	70
Situation in Ireland	71
Lincoln and Lovell land at Dublin, May 1487	72
Lincoln invades England	73
The Battle of Stoke, 16 June 1487	74
The Battle of Stoke: a crisis	75
Henry friendly towards Scotland	76
Death of James III at Sauchieburn, 11 June 1488	76
Henry's second parliament, 9 November 1487	77
Efforts to ensure strong government and good order	77
The Act later called ' pro camera stellata '	78
Attempt to settle Ireland: Edgecombe's mission, 1488	79
The mission not without success	80

CHAPTER IV. FOREIGN POLICY

Henry a lover of peace	81
But his policy directed by diplomatic considerations	81
The ends of his foreign policy	82
The new diplomacy	82
The diplomatic scene; the national states	83
Rise of Spain: strength of France	84
French ambitions in the Low Countries and in Brittany	85
English interest in Brittany: unofficial intervention, 1488	87
Attempted coalition for the defence of Brittany	88
The third parliament, 13 January 1489: 'Statute of Fines'	89

CONTENTS

ix

Taxation for war	90
Resistance in the North: death of Northumberland	91
Treaty of Redon, February 1489, with Anne of Brittany	92
Treaty of Medina del Campo with Spain, 27 March 1489	94
Its unequal terms: the treaty never ratified	96
Dissensions in Brittany: English invasion ill supported, 1489	97
English aid to Maximilian: success at Dixmude, 13 June 1489	98
Break-up of the coalition	101
Henry, speaking peace, prepares for war	102
A new coalition against France, 1490	103
Defection of Spain: Brittany lost	104
Marriage of Charles VIII and the Duchess Anne, 6 December 1491	105
Henry's prestige at stake	106
A war parliament, October 1491	106
Military preparations, 1492	107
Henry invades France and besieges Boulogne, October 1492	108
Treaty of Etaples, 3 November 1492	109
Justification of Henry's policy	110

CHAPTER V. PERKIN WARBECK

Situation in West Europe	112
France intent on Italy	112
State of Italy invites French intervention	113
Charles VIII overruns Italy and occupies Naples, 1494-5	114
League of Venice: Charles expelled, 1495	115
Improved position of England, standing aloof	116
Mystery of Perkin Warbeck	117
He impressed Maximilian and other princes	118
His confession made him a bourgeois from Tournai	119
Used by the Yorkists against Henry	120
Perkin in Ireland, France, and the Netherlands, 1491-4	121
Fate of his adherents in England	122
Execution of Sir William Stanley, 16 February 1495	123
Parliament of October 1495	123
Security under a king de facto	123
Trade war with the Netherlands, 1493-4: attack on the Steelyard	124
Perkin's failure at Deal, July 1495	125
Situation in Ireland	127
Sir Edward Poynings and his laws, 1494-5	128
Irish finances	131
Perkin's failure in Ireland at Waterford and elsewhere	132
Henry makes Kildare deputy again, 1496	133
Perkin in Scotland	134
James IV a prince of the Renaissance	135
Henry's efforts for peace, 1491-5	137
Perkin received as Duke of York in Scotland, November 1495	138
Concressault and Ayala in Scotland	138
Henry unperturbed: Magnus Intercursus with Netherlands 1496	139
Futile invasion by the Scots, September 1496	140

Parliament of January 1497 votes money for the war	140
Taxation produces a rising in Cornwall, 1497	141
Failure of the Cornishmen before London, June 1497	142
Fresh overtures to Scotland, July 1497	143
Perkin dismissed by James, July 1497: rejected by Ireland	144
Attempt of Perkin in the West of England, September 1497	145
Surrender of Perkin, October 1497, and capture of his wife	146
Truce of Ayton with Scotland, September 1497	147
Marriage treaty with Spain, 1496-7: proxy marriage 1499	148
Henry's refusal to quarrel with France: Etaples renewed, 1498	149
Success of Henry	150

CHAPTER VI. FOREIGN AFFAIRS

Situation in Europe	151
The Turkish peril	151
Louis XII invades Italy: occupies Milanese, 1499	152
France and Spain divide Naples: Treaty of Granada, 1500	153
France and Spain quarrel: French beaten out of Naples 1503	153
Louis comes to terms with Maximilian and Philip, 1504	154
Death of Isabella of Spain, November 1504	154
Ferdinand's volte-face: marriage treaty with France, 1505	154
Philip and Maximilian move towards England	154
Hapsburg and Valois sink their differences	155
League of Cambrai against Venice, December 1508	155
Henry excluded	155
Henry's refusal of Mediterranean enterprises	156
He declines to go to war with France	157
Negotiations with Scotland, 1499	157
Treaties with Scotland, January 1502	158
An honourable settlement: Margaret to marry James IV	159
Margaret's progress to Scotland; her marriage, 8 August 1503	161
Henry alive to the possible consequences of the marriage	162
Tension between England and Scotland, 1506-8	164
England's entente with France prevents hostilities	164
Henry has leisure to suppress pretenders	164
A bogus Warwick, Ralph Wilford, executed 1499	164
Executions of Warwick and Perkin, 1499	165
Executions perhaps due to Spanish promptings	166
Defection of Edmund de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, 1499-1501	167
Henry well informed from the Netherlands: Sir Robert Curzon	168
Arrests, conspiracies, and doubts, 1503-4	169
Suffolk used as a pawn by Netherlandish princes	170
Philip, perforce, surrenders Suffolk to Henry, 1506	171
Henry now free from pretenders	171
The Spanish Marriage	172
Final arrangements, 1499-1501	172
Arrival of Catherine at Plymouth, 2 October 1501	172
Magnificent reception of Catherine in London, 1501	173
Marriage of Arthur and Catherine, 14 November 1501	173

CONTENTS

xi

Death of Prince Arthur, April 1502	174
Spain the suitor in subsequent negotiations	175
Henry betrothed to Catherine, 1503	175
Doubts as to the Papal dispensation	176
Prince Henry's secret protest, June 1505	176
Henry's matrimonial projects	177
His overture for the hand of the widowed Juana	178
Unhappy plight of Catherine in England	179
England cultivates the Netherlands	181
Henry meets Philip at Calais, 1500	182
Henry supports Philip on the death of Isabella, 1504	183
Philip compelled to land in England by a storm, 1506	184
Anglo-Burgundian Treaties, 1506	185
The importance of the Intercursus Malus exaggerated	186
Princess Mary betrothed to Archduke Charles, December 1507	187
Futile negotiations, 1508	187
Success of Henry's foreign policy	188

CHAPTER VII. THE ACHIEVEMENT OF HENRY VII

The king and the law	189
Henry did not outrage English constitutional sense	190
Importance of the royal dignity	191
Kingly splendour	192
The law: the courts of common law	193
Justice in the hands of royal officers	194
The justices of the peace	195
Suppression of retainders and local malpractices	196
The Crown keeps control over the justices of the peace	197
Parliament: the lords	197
The commons	198
Royal control over parliament	199
Speakers tried servants of the Crown	200
Henry makes parliament his ally	201
The Council	201
The inner ring in some ways like a cabinet	202
Its development into a Privy Council gradual	203
Geographical expansion of conciliar power	204
Extension of judicial authority of the council	205
The Star Chamber	205
The court (or council) of requests	207
Military power: the yeomen and the guns	208
Use of county musters and indentures	209
The navy: the royal ships	210
Hired vessels and indentures	211
'Regular' forces on land and sea small	212
Financial basis of Henry's success	212
Yield of taxation and of Crown lands	213
Rise in customs not spectacular	214
Exaction of feudal casualties and excessive fines	215

Empson and Dudley	216
New financial system: the chamber	217
Henry's accumulated wealth	218
Henry's economic policy	218
The English ports	219
English shipping	220
The struggle with the Hansa	221
Conflict with Venice	223
Ocean navigation: English ventures to the West	224
John Cabot	225
The Bristol Adventurers	227
Death of Henry, 21 April 1509	228
Henry's will	229
Estimate of Henry VII	230
 CHAPTER VIII. SPLENDOUR OF YOUTH
Marriage and coronation of Henry VIII, June 1509	231
The old councillors remain: Fox alter rex	232
Financial policy altered: lavish expenditure	233
The young king	234
A popular prince	235
Origins of English humanism	236
Foreign scholars in England	237
Castelli, Polydore Vergil, and Peter Vannes	238
Slow growth of humanism	239
The revival of learning and the Church	240
William Grocin and Thomas Linacre	241
John Colet	242
His method of exegesis	243
Neither a violent reformer nor a conventional humanist	244
His school of St. Pauls: William Lily high master	245
Thomas More	246
Decides on a spiritual life in a secular world	247
Enters public life	248
Erasmus in England on the invitation of Mountjoy, 1499-1500	249
Seeks patronage in England again, 1505-6	251
Returns from Italy on Henry's accession, 1509	252
The Praise of Folly	252
Reaction to the Praise of Folly	255
Erasmus at Cambridge: disappointed in England	256
His contribution to English humanism	257
The Utopia, 1516	258
A planned economy	261
Artificiality of Utopia	263
Founded on classical idealism and new discovery	264
The work of a liberal reformer	265
English thought in the main conservative	266
Domestic policy: old institutions of government retained	266
Realpolitik not new	267

CONTENTS

xiii

Foreign policy conventional; hostility to France	267
Henry's naval and military power	268
Treaties with Scotland and France renewed	269
Quarrel with Scotland	270
Julius II determines to expel the French from Italy	271
Henry joins the 'Holy League', 1511	273
The unsuccessful expedition to Guienne, 1512	274
War with Scotland impending, 1512	276
Gallant failure at Brest, 1513	277
Henry invades France: Guinegate, 16 August 1513	279
Preparations to meet the Scottish invasion	280
Battle of Flodden, 9 September 1513	281
Ferdinand's duplicity: overtures to France, March 1514	283
He is outmanœuvred by Henry and Wolsey, July 1514	284
Anglo-French Treaty: Mary married to Louis XII	284
Triumphant Realpolitik	285

CHAPTER IX. THE CARDINAL

Concentration of several authorities in one person	286
Henry never a nonentity	287
Reality of Wolsey's power	287
Wolsey's early life	288
Archbishop of York, 1514 and Cardinal, 1515	289
Legate a latere , 1518	290
Disappointed of Papacy, 1521 and 1523	290
Ecclesiastical policy: emphasis on authority	291
Anticlerical feeling in England	291
The case of Richard Hunne, 1514-15	292
Wolsey's dislike of representative institutions	293
He makes no attempt to deal with the causes of unrest	294
He takes control of the church in England	294
He has no real interest in reform	295
Wolsey as chancellor: amplifies his jurisdiction	295
The Star Chamber	296
Conciliar jurisdiction used in all directions	297
Maintains order: not responsible for the 'Evil May-day'	298
Arbitrary use of power	299
Wolsey as prime minister	299
Promotes his friends and ruins his opponents	300
Sometimes dares to act behind the back of the king	301
But in the main enjoys the royal approval	302
His authoritarian finance unsuccessful	303
Rebuffed by the commons, 1523	303
Failure of the Amicable Grant, 1525	304
Wolsey's foreign policy	305
Death of Louis XII shakes the entente of 1514	305
Futile attempts to offset Francis I's success in Italy, 1515	306
Francis and Charles come to terms at Noyon, 1516	307
Maximilian adheres to Noyon, Dec. 1516: England excluded	307

Diplomatic triumph for Wolsey: Treaty of Universal Peace, 1518	308
Charles V elected King of the Romans, 1519	309
England courted by both sides	309
The Field of Cloth of Gold a sham, June 1520	310
Wolsey officially arbitrator at Calais, 1521	311
Declares for Charles, 24 November 1521	311
Charles in England, 1522	312
Triple attack on France, 1523, a failure	313
Tiring of imperial alliance, Wolsey verges towards France	314
France ruined at Pavia, 1525	315
Vain attempt of Wolsey to share in the spoils	315
Treaty between England and France at 'The More', August 1525	316
Anglo-French alliance: Rome sacked by imperialists, May 1527	317
Futile attempt by Wolsey to exploit the Pope's captivity	318
France and the Empire make the 'Ladies' Peace' of Cambrai, August 1529	319
Wolsey not altogether to blame for the failure of his policy	321
The 'kings' great matter'	321
Story that Wolsey 'engineered' the divorce untrue	322
Henry in love with Anne Boleyn	323
Wolsey's dilemma	324
Henry needs an heir male	325
He is convinced that his union with Catherine is sinful	326
Hope of Papal aid frustrated by Charles's capture of Clement	327
Papal attitude dictated by political necessity	328
Peace of Cambrai the ruin of Wolsey's hopes	328
The fall of Wolsey: indicted for breach of praemunire, 1529	329
Sentenced by king's bench 30 October 1529	330
Owing to royal favour the attack not pressed home	330
Wolsey in his diocese of York: attempt to regain power	331
Wolsey's arrest, 4 November, and death, 29 November 1530	332
His failures and achievements	333
His vast authority inherited by his master	334
 CHAPTER X. ROYAL SUPREMACY
A revolution easily made: atmosphere favourable	335
Clerical shortcomings	336
Secularization of the church	337
Reformers in Germany and France	338
Complacency of European princes	339
Political situation also favourable	339
Rivalry of Habsburg and Valois	340
The advance of the Turks	341
A concerted attack upon the schismatic impossible	341
England had long resented foreign interference	342
Lollard tradition and new ideas from Germany	343
Tyndale's New Testament, 1526, imported into England	343
Holocausts of dangerous books in London	345
Attack on the Oxford scholars, 1528	345

CONTENTS

xv

On Wolsey's fall the clergy are more resolute against heresy	346
Attitude of Sir Thomas More	347
Divorce was the occasion not the cause of the Reformation	348
The appeal to the learned of Europe, 1529	348
The royal victory achieved with the aid of parliament	349
The 'Reformation parliament', 1529-36	349
A landmark in English history	349
Royal influence in parliament	350
Parliament sympathetic rather than subservient	350
Thomas Cromwell a great parliamentary manager	351
His ascent to power	352
The attack on the Church	353
Popular measures against the abuses, 1529	353
Whole of the clergy impleaded for breach of praemunire, 1530	354
Attack on clerical jurisdictions, 1532	354
The submission of the clergy in convocation, May 1532	355
Attack upon the privileges of Rome: Annates Act, 1532	355
Thomas Cranmer made Archbishop of Canterbury, 1533	356
Act in Restraint of Appeals, 1533: its significance	357
Cranmer annuls Henry's marriage with Catherine	357
Pronounces the marriage to Anne Boleyn valid	357
Henry defies the pope: appeals to a general council	358
Breach with Rome completed by the legislation of 1534	358
The Act of Succession, 1534	359
The Act of Supremacy, 1534	359
Extension of the old Statute of Treasons, 1534	360
Popular unrest: the Maid of Kent	361
More and Fisher charged with treason under the new act	362
They and other Catholic martyrs executed, 1535	362
England still supports the king	363
Henry's vain endeavour to enlist the support of James V	363
Unrest in Ireland: Kildare summoned to London	364
Rebellion of Kildare's son 'silken Thomas'	364
His unjust execution, 3 February 1537	365
Lord Leonard Grey in Ireland; his policy condemned	365
Henry offers the nobles a share in monastic land	366
Assumes the title of king of Ireland, 1541	366
Also head of the Church in Ireland	366
Henry's policy in Wales	366
Rowland Lee president of the Council in the Marches, 1534	367
The act of 1536 divides all Wales into shires	367
Act of 1543: attempt to assimilate Wales to England	368
Wales retains her nationality	369

CHAPTER XI. THE FALL OF THE MONASTERIES

Henry assumes title of Supreme Head on earth of the Church, 1535	370
Cromwell as vicar-general has a plenitude of power	370
Assessment of clerical revenues: the Valor Ecclesiasticus	371
Royal revenue increased: desire for capital sums	372

Attack on the monasteries: offers a double advantage	372
State of the religious houses	373
Growth of secularization	375
Schemes of confiscation already in the air	375
Cromwell empowered to hold a general visitation, January 1535	376
The visitation and the visitors	377
Act of March 1536: smaller houses suppressed	377
The machinery of confiscation	378
The fall of Anne Boleyn, 1536	379
Henry marries Jane Seymour, 30 May 1536	380
A new Act of Succession, 1536	381
Need to define doctrine	382
Henry steers a middle course: the Ten Articles, 1536	383
The Injunctions of 1536: a move towards Protestantism	383
The Pilgrimage of Grace	385
Weakness of governmental machinery in the north	385
The Duke of Richmond's council	386
The riot at Louth, October 1536	387
Strength of the Lincolnshire rising	388
Rising in Yorkshire: Robert Aske	389
Norfolk compelled to compromise	390
Settlement at Doncaster, 6 December 1536	391
Punishment of the North	392
Council of the North established, 1537	393
Royal power enhanced: birth of Prince Edward, 12 October 1537	394
The Bishops' Book, conservative in tone	395
Attack upon images: Becket's shrine	396
Destruction of the Poles	396
Fresh injunctions, 1538: Matthew's Bible, 1539	397
Fall of the great monasteries, 1539	398
Fate of the religious	399
The king's disposal of monastic wealth	400
Effects of the dissolution	401
 CHAPTER XII. IMPERIUM MERUM
Arrogance and confidence of Henry	402
Foreign affairs	403
Threat of a Catholic attack, 1539	403
Marriage treaty with Cleves, October 1539	403
The marriage dissolved: Henry marries Catherine Howard, 1540	404
War between Francis and Charles: Henry secure	404
War with Scotland, 1542	405
Solway Moss; Henry's great opportunity	406
The opportunity lost: Hertford's devastations, 1544-5	407
Henry goes to war with France: capture of Boulogne, 1544	409
Peace made, 7 June 1546	410
Domestic affairs: finance	410
The cost of the wars	410
Ordinary revenue and ordinary taxation inadequate	410

CONTENTS

xvii

Irregular exactions	411
Debasement of the currency	412
Borrowing abroad	412
Domestic affairs: royal absolutism	413
Henry holds the balance: position of Thomas Cromwell	414
Fall of Cromwell, 1540	415
Place of Cromwell in English history	416
Henry marries Catherine Howard, 28 July 1540	417
No great Catholic reaction	417
Execution of Catherine, 1542	419
Henry weds Catherine Parr, 12 July 1543	419
No great Protestant reaction	419
Attacks on Cranmer fail	420
The fall of the Howards	421
Henry determined to secure Edward's succession	422
Domestic affairs: the Church	422
Royal supremacy generally accepted	423
Royal power little limited by convocation	424
Henry pursues a middle way	425
The Statute of Six Articles, 1539: an attempt at unity	426
The act moderately used	427
The king milder than the ecclesiastics	428
Reading of the Bible limited	429
Cranmer's influence prevails against that of Gardiner	429
The King's Book; orthodox in tone, 1543	430
Cranmer's liturgical reforms; the English Litany, 1545	431
Protestant influences are more powerful	432
Henry's achievement: the middle way	433
Domestic affairs: the machinery of government	433
The new courts	434
Development of the Privy Council	435
The Council the instrument of the king	436
The king makes parliament his ally	437
The significance of the Proclamations Act, 1539	438
The king relieved of the liability to repay loans	439
The commons' privileges: cases of Strode and Ferrers	440
Growth of parliamentary power and prestige	441
Death of Henry, 28 January 1547: his achievement	442
 CHAPTER XIII. ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT
The new spirit: Calvinism and capitalism	444
English agriculture	445
The manor losing its old stability	446
Effects of inflation	447
Growth of a land market	448
Inclosures; for tillage and for pasture	449
The Crown apprehensive	450
Acts against inclosure, 1489-1515	451
Work of Wolsey's commission of 1517	452

Acts against vagabondage, 1495-1531	453
Act of 1536	454
Working hours and wages	455
New opportunities and new hardships	456
A chorus of denunciation	457
The towns: urban society loses the old security	458
Gild merchants and craft gilds	458
Craft gilds become oligarchical	459
Yeomanry and livery	460
Growth of mercantile companies	461
Capitalism in manufacture and trade	461
Wholesale trade in cloth: the clothier	462
Manufacture leaves the town for the villages	463
Attempts of government to support the towns	464
And to control crafts	465
Strength of local oligarchy	465
Attempts to protect the consumer by legislation	466
Efforts to prevent fraud	467
Government supports natives against aliens	468
Protectionist policy	469
Foreign trade: exports and imports	470
Alien merchants: Italians and Easterlings	471
Native merchants gain ground: the Merchant Staplers	472
The Merchant Adventurers	473
Navigation Acts of Henry VII and Henry VIII	474
Importance of the trade with the Netherlands	474
Decline (and fall, 1552) of the Hansa	475
Evidence from the customs returns	476
The government realist in its economic policy	477
 CHAPTER XIV. THE YOUNG JOSIAH
Predominance of the ecclesiastical issue	478
Boyhood of Edward	479
Authority of a boy king overrides his father's will	480
The Crown in the hands of politicians	481
Survival of the monarchy a proof of its strength	481
Political difficulties	481
No real danger from pope or emperor	482
Ambitious designs of Henry II of France	482
Somerset invades Scotland	483
His victory at Pinkie, 10 September 1547	484
The Queen of Scots sent to France, 1548	485
English ejected from Scotland, 1549	485
War with France, 1549	486
Treaty of Boulogne, 29 March 1550: Boulogne lost	486
Treaty of Angers, 1551: Edward betrothed to Elizabeth	486
English weakness towards France	487
Domestic affairs: factions and discontents	488
Thomas Seymour the Lord Admiral beheaded 20 March, 1549	488

CONTENTS

xix

Kett's rebellion, 1549	489
Moderation of insurgents	490
Rout at Dussindale, 27 August 1549	490
Somerset deposed: rise of Warwick	491
Execution of Somerset, 22 January 1552	492
Warwick, now Duke of Northumberland, consolidates his party	493
Domestic affairs: constitutional machinery	493
Henry's will overridden: Somerset protector	493
Position of the protector insecure	495
The council substantially that of Henry	496
Its organization improved	496
An instrument of authority, not a check upon it	497
Extent of the Crown's control of parliament	498
Somerset's legislation, 1547	499
Commons reluctant to vote supply	500
Shaky finance: attempts at reform	501
The coinage further debased	502
Parliament a real check on authority	502
Economic problems: dearth amid plenty	503
Attacks upon inclosure: John Hales	504
Somerset's commission on inclosures, 1548	505
Reaction after Kett's rebellion	506
Expansion of trade	507
The religious issue	508
Various opinions as to the Eucharist	509
Henry's death followed by open dissension	510
Question as to the royal supremacy during a minority	511
Without Henry's 'conscience' supremacy becomes 'Erastian'	511
Reform under Somerset: influence of Cranmer	512
Ecclesiastical legislation of 1547	513
Gardiner sent to the Tower, 30 June 1548	514
Cranmer seeks for a compromise	515
The Act of Uniformity, 1549: First Book of Common Prayer	515
Advent of foreign divines	516
A new ordinal, 1550	517
Attack upon the Catholic bishops, 1550-3	518
Attacks upon ceremonies: Hooper's visitation, 1551	519
The Second Book of Common Prayer, 1552	520
The Forty-Two Articles, June 1553	521
Cranmer, Gardiner, and the royal supremacy	522
Northumberland's bid for power	522
The king's 'devise': Lady Jane Grey	523
Death of Edward, 6 July: his character	524
CHAPTER XV. THE REIGN OF MARY
The Lady Jane proclaimed 10 July 1553: escape of Mary	526
Dilemma of Northumberland	527
Collapse of his party	528
Arrest of Northumberland, 21 July	529

Mary enters London, 3 August 1553	529
Lenience of Mary's government	530
Recall of Henry VIII's councillors	531
Some constitutional development	532
At first a policy of moderation	533
Character and ambitions of Mary	534
She intends to marry a Spaniard	535
Foreign affairs: situation in Europe	535
Struggle between French and imperial interests	536
Mary pledged to Philip, 29 October 1553	537
The match, despite caveats, unpopular in England	537
Abortive rising of Sir Thomas Wyatt, January 1554	538
Consequences of Wyatt's rebellion	539
Execution of the Lady Jane and her husband, 12 February 1554	539
Elizabeth in danger	540
Marriage of Philip and Mary, 25 July 1554	541
Mary's ecclesiastical policy	542
Forestalling parliament, she abandons her early moderation	542
Flight of foreign reformers	543
Catholic bishops restored, 1553	544
Parliament of October–December 1553	544
Ecclesiastical legislation of Edward VI annulled	544
No change as to supremacy and church lands	544
Attack on the reformed clergy	545
Parliament of April–May 1554 will not revive heresy laws	546
Cardinal Pole to come as legate	547
His arrival in England	548
England reconciled to Rome, 30 November 1554	549
Laws against heresy revived	549
Burnings of Protestants in 1555	550
Latimer and Ridley burned, 16 October 1555	550
Condemnation of Cranmer	551
Burning of Cranmer, 21 March 1556	552
Triumph of the martyrs	553
Tragedy of Mary: Mary disappointed of issue	553
Philip goes abroad, September 1555	553
Parliament will not restore the church lands	554
Death of Gardiner, 12 November 1555	555
Philip excommunicated, 1556	556
Pole deprived and summoned to Rome, 1557	556
Unpopularity of Spaniards in England	557
Loss of Calais, January 1558	558
English forces help Philip at Gravelines, July 1558	559
English interests disregarded by Philip: Calais lost	559
Death of Mary: 17 November 1558	560
Significance of her reign	561

CHAPTER XVI. THE ACHIEVEMENT OF THE AGE

Creation of a nation state	562
A competent machinery of government	563
Power and prestige of the Crown	564

CONTENTS

xxi

The law and the lawyers	565
Alliance of Crown and parliament	566
Crown, commons, and common sense	567
Royal supremacy: a transference easily made	568
Continuity of tradition in religion	569
The world of learning: the universities	569
New colleges and new standards	570
Scholarship at Oxford and Cambridge	571
Governmental control: Wolsey, Cromwell, and Henry	572
Consequent uncertainties and anxieties	573
Somerset's attempts at reform	574
Reaction under Mary	575
The English schools: decline as well as progress	576
Good theories not always carried into effect	576
Improved Latin, the Vulgaria : some Greek	577
Literature: the English printers	578
Popularity of the old standards	579
The chroniclers and the historians	580
Political thought: the Tree of Commonwealth	581
The Boke named the Governour ; Renaissance influences	582
The English Bible: the works of More	583
Development of English prose	583
Poetry at a low ebb: Alexander Barclay	584
John Skelton	585
Little development in drama	585
Pageantry: the morality plays	586
Songs and sonnets: Wyatt and Howard	587
Music: persistence of the English tradition	588
The great organists: the Chapel Royal	588
Royal patronage	589
English reputation for music	590
English architecture: a virile native style	591
Fine conception and good craftsmanship	591
Foreign influences apparent mainly in details	592
Some great towers	592
King Henry VII's chapel	593
Domestic architecture: the colleges	594
The palaces: Hampton Court	595
Country houses: urban houses	596
Domestic furniture	597
Painting: main interest in portraits	598
Foreign artists	599
Hans Holbein	600
He founded no school	601
The English: a lusty people	602
APPENDIX	604
BIBLIOGRAPHY	609
TABLE I	656
INDEX	659

LIST OF MAPS

The Roads of England in the Tudor Period	24
NE. France and the Low Countries	100
Ireland, showing the English Pale and the 'countries' of the great chiefs	126
The Borders of England and Scotland, showing the Marches	278
Wales to show the effect of the Acts of 1536 and 1542/3	facing 368
The Sees of England, showing the modifications made by Henry VIII	374
The North of England showing the Palatinates, Honours, Liberties, and Baronies about the time of the Pilgrimage of Grace	384