

Contents

Acknowledgments	7
Introduction	9
Klaus von Beyme
I. Political Science Taking Sides – Why, How?	11
How Political Science Might Regain Relevance and Obtain an Audience: A Manifesto for the 21st Century	13
Towards Creating a Discipline With a “Regional Stamp”: Central-East European Political Science and Ethno-Cultural Diversity	21
Pluralism and Democratic Governance: A Century of Changing Research Frameworks	29
Pluralism as a Critical Political Theory	53
II. Political Science and State Power	73
Political Science in Central-East Europe and the Impact of Politics: Factors of Diversity, Forces of Convergence (with Leslie A. Pal)	75
German Political Science at the Crossroads: The Ambivalent Response to the 1933 Nazi Seizure of Power	105
III. Political Science and Ideology (1)	141
Germany’s “Peculiar Course”: Coming to Grips with Patterns of Anti-Democratic Thinking
From Hegelianism to Neo-Pluralism: The Uneasy Relationship between Private and Public Interests in Germany	143

‘Mitteleuropa’ in Historical and Contemporary Perspective	155
IV. Political Science and Ideology (2)	167
Another Peculiar Course: American ‘Gun-Mindedness’ -- Some Origins and Consequences
Myths and Realities of Frontier Violence: A Look at the Gunfighter Saga	169
Projecting Landscapes of the Human Mind onto Another World: Changing Faces of an Imaginary Mars	185
V. Political Science and Policy Transfer	205
International Pressures and Domestic Politics during Portugal’s Transition to Democracy
Portugal and Western Europe: Shifting Involvements	207
External Influences on the Portuguese Revolution: The Role of Western Europe	241
Sources	261
About the Author	263
Index	265