

Contents

|                              |             |
|------------------------------|-------------|
| Notes on contributors | x    |
| Acknowledgements      | xiii |

|                     |          |
|---------------------|----------|
| Introduction | 1 |
| STEPHEN PRATTEN     |          |

|                                                  |           |
|--------------------------------------------------|-----------|
| PART I                                    |           |
| The Cambridge approach to social ontology | 17 |

|                                          |           |
|------------------------------------------|-----------|
| 1 A conception of social ontology | 19 |
| TONY LAWSON                              |           |

|                                                      |           |
|------------------------------------------------------|-----------|
| 2 Quine and the ontological turn in economics | 53 |
| JOHN LATSIS                                          |           |

|                                              |           |
|----------------------------------------------|-----------|
| 3 The scope of ontological theorising | 68 |
| STEPHEN PRATTEN                              |           |

|                                |           |
|--------------------------------|-----------|
| PART II                 |           |
| Traditions and projects | 95 |

|                                            |           |
|--------------------------------------------|-----------|
| 4 The nature of heterodox economics | 97 |
| TONY LAWSON                                |           |

|                                                                                                                           |            |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| 5 Economics as progress: the LSE approach to econometric modelling and critical realism as programmes for research | 127 |
| STEPHEN PRATTEN                                                                                                           |            |

|                 |                                                                                                            |            |
|-----------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| 6        | An evolutionary economics? On borrowing from evolutionary biology                                   | 162 |
|                 | TONY LAWSON                                                                                                |            |
| 7        | Structure, agency and causality in post-revival Austrian economics: tensions and resolutions        | 200 |
|                 | PAUL LEWIS                                                                                                 |            |
| PART III |                                                                                                            |            |
|                 | Interventions in the history of economic thought                                                    | 229 |
| 8        | Smith and Newton: some methodological issues concerning general economic equilibrium theory         | 231 |
|                 | LEONIDAS MONTES                                                                                            |            |
| 9        | Metatheory as the key to understanding: Schumpeter after Shionoya                                   | 265 |
|                 | MÁRIO GRAÇA MOURA                                                                                          |            |
| 10       | Order without equilibrium: a critical realist interpretation of Hayek's notion of spontaneous order | 287 |
|                 | STEVE FLEETWOOD                                                                                            |            |
| PART IV  |                                                                                                            |            |
|                 | Methods                                                                                             | 313 |
| 11       | Methods of abstraction and isolation in modern economics                                            | 315 |
|                 | TONY LAWSON                                                                                                |            |
| 12       | Applied economics, contrast explanation and asymmetric information                                  | 338 |
|                 | TONY LAWSON                                                                                                |            |
| PART V   |                                                                                                            |            |
|                 | Ethics                                                                                              | 357 |
| 13       | Critical ethical naturalism: an orientation to ethics                                               | 359 |
|                 | TONY LAWSON                                                                                                |            |
| 14       | Realism, universalism and capabilities                                                              | 388 |
|                 | NUNO MARTINS                                                                                               |            |

|                                                                                                                                                    |            |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| PART VI                                                                                                                                     |            |
| Elaborating conceptions of social reality                                                                                                   | 411 |
| 15 Ontology and the study of social reality: emergence, organisation, community, power, social relations, corporations, artefacts and money | 413 |
| TONY LAWSON                                                                                                                                        |            |
| 16 Open and closed systems and the Cambridge school                                                                                         | 465 |
| VINCA BIGO                                                                                                                                         |            |
| 17 The nature of gender                                                                                                                     | 485 |
| TONY LAWSON                                                                                                                                        |            |
| 18 Technological objects, social positions, and the Transformational Model of Social Activity                                               | 507 |
| PHILIP FAULKNER AND JOCHEN RUNDE                                                                                                                   |            |
| 19 Technology and the extension of human capabilities                                                                                       | 535 |
| CLIVE LAWSON                                                                                                                                       |            |
| 20 What is an institution?                                                                                                                  | 553 |
| TONY LAWSON                                                                                                                                        |            |
| Index                                                                                                                                       | 578 |