

Contents

Acknowledgements	viii
Introduction	1
1 The Humanistic Heritage of James and Lubbock: the Emergence of an Aesthetic of the Novel	16
2 The Importance of E. M. Forster's Aspects of the Novel	41
3 Privileging Literary Criticism: the Legacy of F. R. Leavis's The Great Tradition	60
4 'The Idea Embodied in the Cosmology': the Significance of Dorothy Van Ghent's The English Novel: Form and Function	80
5 'Formal Realism': the Importance of Ian Watt's The Rise of the Novel	99
6 Two Major Voices of the 1950s: Northrop Frye's Anatomy of Criticism and Erich Auerbach's Mimesis	118
7 Reading as a Moral Activity: the Importance of Wayne C. Booth's The Rhetoric of Fiction	151
8 The Consolation of Form: the Theoretical and Historical Significance of Frank Kermode's The Sense of an Ending	170
9 Marxist Criticism of the English Novel: Arnold Kettle's An Introduction to the English Novel and Raymond Williams's The English Novel from Dickens to Lawrence	187
10 The Fictional Theories of J. Hillis Miller: Humanism, Phenomenology, and Deconstruction in The Form of Victorian Fiction and Fiction and Repetition	222
Selected Bibliography	267
Index	273