1 Introduction 1

Linda Wheeldon

References 6

2 Producing words: How mind meets mouth 7

Kathryn Bock and Zeni M. Griffin

Introduction 7

The anatomy of language production 9

Understanding and producing words 16

How are word production and recognition linked? 36

Conclusions 37

Acknowledgements 39

Notes 39

References 40

3 Form representations in word production 49

Antje S. Meyer

Introduction 49

The standard model of word-form encoding 50

The segmental representation 52

The metrical representation 56

The phonetic representation 62

The necessity of decomposed form representations 64

4	WEAVER++ and other computational models of lemma retrieval and word-form encoding	71
	Ardi Roelofs
	Introduction	71
	The classical spreading-activation model: Dell (1986, 1988)	76
	Problems with the classical spreading-activation model	79
	The WEAVER++ model	83
	References	111
5	When the words won't come: Relating impairments and models of spoken word production	115
	Lyndsey Nickels and David Howard
	Introduction	115
	Levelt's model of spoken word production	117
	Levels of deficit	118
	Conclusions	136
	Acknowledgements	137
	Notes	138
	References	138
6	On the naming of objects: Evidence from cognitive neuroscience	143
	Glyn W. Humphreys, Cathy J. Price, and M. Jane Riddoch
	Processing stages in object naming	144
	Continuous processes in normal object naming	145
	Visual constraints on name retrieval in normal observers	147
	Neuropsychological impairments of object naming	149
	Impaired visual knowledge and name retrieval: Two cases	150
	Visual degradation impairs name retrieval	153
	The functional anatomy of object naming	154
	Models of object naming	157
	Conclusions	160
	Acknowledgements	161
	Note	161

8 Morphological systems and structure in language production 227

Rachelle Waksler

Introduction	227
Morphological types of language	228
Morpheme categories and the lexical entry	233
Inter- and intralevel organisation	241
Concluding remarks	244
Notes	245
References	246

9 Generating prosodic structure 249

Linda Wheeldon

Introduction	249
Some connected speech phenomena	250
The prosodic hierarchy	253
Psycholinguistic models of speech production	259
Generating prosodic structure: Experimental evidence	261
The functions of prosody	267
In summary	270
References	270

10 Language production in children 275

LouAnn Gerken and Diane Ohala

Introduction	275
Children's deviation from adult models	275
The relation of child and adult forms: Two examples	277
Unifying the approaches	285
Notes	286
References	287

11 Syntax in language production: An approach using tree-adjoining grammars 291

Fernanda Ferreira

Introduction	291
Models of syntactic production	292
Tree-adjoining grammar (TAG)	295
Production of syntax	304
Syntactic production based on TAG	321
Notes	327
References	327

12 Conceptual structures in language production 331

Mark Smith

The rationalist view of conceptual structure	332
Against precise replication	334
The efficiency of grammatical structure	342
The complexity of conceptual structure	352
