

Contents

Preface	VII
Introduction	IX
Chapter 1: Information and adaptation	1
1.1 Mutual information	1
1.2 Valuable information	8
1.3 Principle of the information maximum	10
1.4 Expansion: Principle of the entropy maximum	15
1.5 Adaptation as organization	24
Chapter 2: Evolution and creation	31
2.1 Life	31
2.2 Reflexion as a factor of evolution	34
2.3 Memory	38
2.4 Response of the system to a new stimulus	41
2.5 Conditions of the informational interaction. Threshold	46
2.6 Emotions	51
2.7 Perception and pattern recognition	55
2.8 Consciousness	59
2.9 Thinking	65
2.10 Creation	67
2.11 Intuition and logic	73
Chapter 3: Mechanisms of language	79
3.1 Language: How many mechanisms are involved?	80
3.2 From pre-linguistic mechanisms – to language	85
3.3 On language as one of the roots of literature	90
3.4 The sound structure of language: Choice of the information channel	92
3.5 Phonetic structures: Possible ideal types	95
3.6 Possible evolution of sound structures	99
3.7 At the final step of evolution	104
3.8 Physical realization of speech communication	107

Chapter 4: Construction of the aesthetic sphere	109
4.1 Natural objects: Absolute and conventional criteria	110
4.2 Artificial objects: By-product and special perfecting impacts	115
4.3 Concrete images and art	120
4.4 Objects' features, signs, and art	127
4.5 Emotional impact of art: Social aspect	132
4.6 The «Hamburg score» of art	137
 Chapter 5: Devices of art	 143
5.1 How to attract attention?	144
5.2 How to keep attention? Nuance	148
5.3 How to switch attention? Contrast	157
5.4 Laws of harmony: Golden section	161
5.5 Temporal structures in poetical works: Theoretical considerations	166
5.6 Temporal structures: Experimental results	169
 Towards a human integral culture (concluding remarks)	 177
 Bibliography	 179