

International Law: Process and Prospect

by
Anthony D'Amato

Transnational Publishers, Inc.
Irvington, New York

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	v
Introduction	vii
Chapter One. Is International Law Really "Law"?	1
Chapter Two. Force or Enforcement?	27
Chapter Three. "Territorial Integrity" and "Political Independence"	56
Chapter Four. Use of Force Against Nuclear Installations	73
Chapter Five. Use of Force Against Tyranny	86
Chapter Six. Customary International Law	98
Chapter Seven. Human Rights as Entitlements	146
Chapter Eight. Human Rights as Customary Law	179
Chapter Nine. The Individual Versus the State	204
Chapter Ten. The Role of the State in the Era of Human Rights	234
Chapter Eleven. The Commercial and Political Desirability of Human Rights	257
Chapter Twelve. Strong Opinions	274
Chapter Thirteen. Problems of Accepting the World Court's Compulsory Jurisdiction	295
Chapter Fourteen. Territorial Apartheid	321
Chapter Fifteen. Nicaragua and the Academic View of International Law	348
Postscript. International Law as a Career	358
Index	371