

Contents

Christian J. Tams

The 'International Community' as a Legal Notion

1	Introduction	5
2	The 'International Community': What's in a Name?	6
(a)	Competing visions of international order	6
(b)	The essential normative claim	6
(c)	False dichotomies	8
(d)	The use of the concept in different traditions of thought	8
3	The Function of International Law in the 'International Community'	11
(a)	Generalities	11
(b)	International law as the 'glue' of the 'international community'	11
(c)	International law's ambivalence	12
(d)	International law as a site of contestation	13
4	The Proper Law of the 'International Community': Selected Sites of Contestation	14
(a)	Three sample tests	14
(b)	The 'international community' in the international law-making process	14
(c)	The 'international community' in the UN's 'peace machinery'	18
(d)	The 'international community' and the law of state responsibility	21
5	Concluding Reflections	23
	References	25

Commentary by Theresa Reinold

The International Community and the Autonomy of International Law: Response to Christian Tams 31

Introduction	31
International law as an instrument of domination?	32
Legal autopoiesis and the concept of normative closure	33
The openness of international law's secondary rules: ex iniuria ius oritur	33
Consequences for the autonomy and the rule of law	35
Conclusion	36
References	36