

CONTENTS

1	Introduction: Objects in Prose, from Actants to Things	1
	Historicizing the Material	6
	Reevaluating Ways of Reading Objects	11
	Heeding Object Agency	15
	Literature as a Thing	18
	Conspicuous Things, 1789–1832	25
	Bibliography	35
2	A Pin, a Mirror, and a Pen: Everyday It-Narrators, Conspicuous Tools	43
	It-Narratives in the Eighteenth Century	47
	The History of a Pin (1798): Responsibility and the Didactic It-Narrator	52
	Defamiliarizing the Satirical It-Narrator in “Adventures of a Mirror” (1791)	59
	“The Adventures of a Pen” (1806) and (Hyper)Functioning Tools	67
	Bibliography	84
3	“Very Conspicuous on One of His Fingers”: Generative Things in Austen’s Juvenilia, Sense and Sensibility, and Emma	91
	Objects, Consumerism, and Austen’s Literary Form	94
	Genre Conventions and Objects in Austen’s Juvenilia	98

	The Love Token as Plot Device in Sense and Sensibility	108
	Pianofortes as Actants in Emma	115
	Bibliography	130
4	Unwieldy Objects in De Quincey's Confessions (1821): Things That Undermine Subjectivity	137
	De Quincey's "Involutés": Luggage, Books, and Other Conspicuous Objects	141
	Indifferent Things in the House in London	148
	Destroyed, Lost, and Appropriated Things in Oxford	153
	"Turned out" of Dove Cottage (By Books)	161
	The Nightmare: Things That Come Alive	169
	Bibliography	177
5	Performing Authorship in the Silver Fork Novel: Managing a Thing Filled with Objects	185
	Fashionable Novels, Lithographs, and a Crisis of Representation	191
	Describing the "Real" in Gore's Pin Money (1831)	199
	Static Representations and Boredom in the Silver Fork Novel	206
	Distancing the Reader from Representations: Performing Authorship	210
	Bibliography	223
6	Conclusion: All Those "Tables and Chairs": Productive Objects and Chaotic Things?	229
	Bibliography	238
	Index	241