

Preface	10
Chapter One	12
On Which Ground?
Introduction: Land, property and speculation	18
1. Occasion	24
2. Research question	29
3. State of research	30
3.1 The land issue as a recent discourse	31
3.2 The land issue as a discourse in urban design between 1880 and 1930	34
3.2.1 Densely populated cities as a precondition	35
3.2.2 Urban design theories	41
4. Methodical approach	65
Epilogue: How can a changing land division influence typological issues?	68
Chapter Two	72
Which Idea of City?
Introduction: The expanded city at the turn of the 20 th century	74
1. Urban societies	86
2. Spatial cities	92
Epilogue: The plot under the consideration of social and spatial issues	96
Chapter Three	102
Positions: A Scientific Discourse on the Matter of Land and Parcelling
Introduction: Beautiful spaces	104
1. The writings of Camillo Sitte.	105
1.1 Perceiving the city	111
1.2 Parcelling in favor of the irregular	124
2. The writings of Hans Bernoulli	130
2.1 The city as a collective organism	137
2.2 Ordered communities	141
3. The writings of Theodor Fischer	150
3.1 On the relationship of subjects	160
3.2 The plot as a strategic tool	166
Epilogue: The thematization of the plot	168

Chapter Four	170
Characters: On the Relationship between Plot and Building
Introduction: Notions on cities and housing	173
1. Camillo Sitte's city expansion in Teplice	174
1.1 Connected individuals	188
1.2 Enclosed sceneries	189
2. Hans Bernoulli's cooperative housing estate Hirzbrunnenquartier in Basel	194
2.1 Associated communities	208
2.2 Heterogeneous formations	210
3. Theodor Fischer's workers housing estate Alte Heide in Munich	214
3.1 Alternating fields	230
3.2 Open structures	231
Epilogue: The plot as a spatial mediator	237
Chapter Five	240
Neither Private Nor Public: Revisiting the Land Issue
Annex	252
I.I Bibliography	253
I.II Table of figures	264
I.III Summary Italian/German	270
I.IV Acknowledgements	276