

Contents

List of abbreviations	25
------------------------------------	-----------

Part I The study of texts: practical knowledge

Introduction	29
---------------------------	-----------

1 The construction of practical knowledge	33
1 The premise of knowledge: placing practical knowledge	33
1.1 Shared bodies of knowledge and malleable categories	34
1.2 Interdependent branches of knowledge	36
2 Defining practical knowledge	38
2.1 Practice-based knowledge	39
2.1.1 Experience and experiment	39
2.1.2 Theory and practice	41
2.2 Secret knowledge	42
2.2.1 Books of secrets: a frequent literary genre of practical knowledge	42
2.2.2 A taxonomy of secrets	46
2.2.3 Professional secrets	49
2.3 Technical and technological knowledge	51
2.4 Silent or tacit knowledge	52
2.5 Useful knowledge	54
2.6 Common knowledge	55
3 Theorizing practical knowledge	56
3.1 Knowledge (re) production	56
3.1.1 Why write?	56
3.1.2 Issues of authorship and practical writings	58
3.2 Form and conventions of practical knowledge	61

3.2.1	The form of the recipe	62
3.2.2	Recipes and narrations: mechanisms of persuasion	64
3.2.3	Conventions of measurements: quantifying time	65
3.3	Functionality and raison d'être of recipes	71
3.3.1	Implication of instruction	71
3.3.2	Function and dysfunction of early modern recipes	72
3.3.3	The promise of truth and control	77
3.3.4	Truth and trust	78
3.3.5	Claims of authority	79
3.3.4	Practical knowledge and the spiritual dimension	81
4	Conclusion	84
2	The transmission of practical knowledge	85
1	Transmission dynamics and the metaphor of rhizome	85
2	The appearance of textual variations	95
3	Contextualizing knowledge transmission: from origin to wider circulation	101
3.1	Knowledge transmission in the professional environment of a painter's workshop	102
3.2	Practical knowledge, laboratories, and secret societies	106
4	Conclusion	110
3	The early modern users of practical knowledge: mediating the information flux	113
1	Introduction	113
1.1	Gatekeepers	116
1.2	Mediators	119
1.3	The Professori de' Secreti	121
2	Literary mediators	123
2.1	The fortune of Isabella Cortese	123
2.2	Entanglement between Alessio Piemontese and Girolamo Ruscelli	133

3	Mediating practitioners	138
3.1	At the border of quack medicine: the case of Leonardo Fioravanti	138
3.2	The clear case of Sir Hugh Plat	143
4	Conclusion	150
 Part II A Very Proper Treatise (1573): the case study of an art technological printed book
Introduction		155
 1 A Very Proper Treatise (1573) as a literary product, reflecting art technological knowledge
1	Introduction to a text	159
2	The importance of the title: overview, public, and utility	161
3	The intended audience of A Very Proper Treatise	165
4	The textuality of material culture: colors	171
5	Textual transmission involving A Very Proper Treatise	173
6	Conclusion	182
 2 Selling secrets. The print business as a mediator in the dissemination of art technological knowledge
1	The introduction to a book	183
2	Tottel's Trademark	184
3	Editorial design of a printer's compilation	191
3.1	...neuer put into printe before this time	191
3.2	Concept of two layers	193
3.3	The allocated heraldic application	194
3.4	The internal editing process	195

4	The visual design of practical knowledge: the title page as a visual marketing tool	197
5	Cheap Print?	200
5.1	Popular print and preconceptions concerning typographical choices	200
5.2	A paper story	202
5.3	New editions, new ways	204
6	Conclusion: creating opportunities	209
3	Buying secrets. The audience and consumption of art technological literature	211
1	Introduction	211
2	Contextualizing the concepts and material of the current chapter	212
2.1	The concept of consumption and consumers	212
2.2	Measuring a universe of consumers	214
3	The early modern world of books	216
3.1	The early modern book: a survey of bookbindings and book realities	216
3.2	Early modern book consumers: a survey of book owners	220
4	Early modern book consumption: a survey of attitudes and interests	226
4.1	Books as paper objects and the religious interest of early modern consumers	228
4.2	How art, heraldry, a book collection, and a love story are connected in the case of Phebe Challoner and James Ussher	228
4.2.1	The Ussher couple	232
4.2.2	Phebe Challoner's books	233
4.2.3	A reader profile of Phebe Challoner	237
4.2.4	Heraldic and artistic knowledge for James Ussher	238
4.2.5	Consumption: artistic interest in heraldic books	239
4.2.6	Artistic and practical interest in A Very Proper Treatise	241
5	Conclusion	243

General conclusion	245
Conclusion: A story of practical knowledge	247
Appendix	253
Appendix 1 Various editions of A Very Proper Treatise	253
Appendix 2 Physical presence and reproductions of A Very Proper Treatise	256
Appendix 3 Collation of A Very Proper Treatise	258
Appendix 4 Phebe Challoner's personal library	279
List of figures	281
List of tables	283
Bibliography	285
Index	305