

Hjalmar P. Petersen and Laurence Voeltzel

Faroese Phonetics and Phonology

DE GRUYTER MOUTON

Contents

Acknowledgments — VII

Abbreviations — XIII

1 The Faroese language: a brief overview — 1

- 1.1 General background — 2
- 1.1.1 Historical background — 2
- 1.1.2 Geographical and typological remarks — 4
- 1.2 Written and spoken Faroese — 7
- 1.2.1 History of the written norm — 7
- 1.2.2 Faroese dialects — 9
- 1.3 Previous works on Faroese — 9
- 1.3.1 Transcription — 11
- 1.3.2 Research in Faroese phonology — 13
- Appendix — 14

2 Orthography and pronunciation — 19

- 2.1 Vowel graphemes and the historical hiatus — 20
- 2.2 Consonant graphemes and their pronunciation — 26
- 2.3 Alternations hidden by the orthography — 30

3 Element theory — 36

- 3.1 The internal structure of segments — 36
- 3.2 The syllabic structure — 41

4 Dialects and dialect variation — 51

- 4.1 Classification of the dialects — 53
- 4.1.1 Dialectal differences in vowels — 55
- 4.1.2 Dialectal differences in the consonants — 63
- 4.2 Additional differences in the morphology — 69
- 4.3 Dialect levelling, dialect mixing, and attitudes towards dialects — 75

5 Phonological changes — 78

- 5.1 Introduction — 78
- 5.2 The development of the vowels — 81
- 5.2.1 The quantity shift — 86
- 5.2.2 Conditional vowel changes — 90

5.2.3	The u -umlaut — 94
5.3	The development of the consonants — 95
5.3.1	Changes in initial position — 95
5.3.2	The development of the obstruents — 96
5.3.3	The development of the sonorants and approximants — 99
5.3.4	Palatalization — 102
5.3.5	Skerping or glide strengthening — 104
5.3.6	Other consonant changes — 108
5.3.7	The relation between unstressed vowels, diphthongization, segmentation, skerping, and lenition — 110
5.3.8	Morphologization — 110
6	Stress patterns, syllable structure, and phonotactics — 114
6.1	Description of stress — 114
6.2	Sonority and syllabification — 121
6.3	Phonotactics — 123
6.3.1	Complex onsets — 124
6.3.2	Complex two-consonant codas — 128
6.3.3	Complex three and four-consonant codas — 134
6.3.4	Disyllabic roots — 135
6.4	Syllable structure — 141
6.4.1	Stressed open syllables — 142
6.4.2	Onsets — 149
6.4.3	Word/domain-final consonants — 159
7	Vowels — 167
7.1	Contexts and realizations — 167
7.1.1	Monophthongs — 167
7.1.2	Diphthongs — 177
7.1.2.1	/a/-diphthongs — 180
7.1.2.2	/i/-diphthongs — 183
7.1.2.3	/u/-diphthongs — 187
7.2	The phonetics of Faroese vowels — 192
	Appendix — 198
8	Formalization of the Faroese vocalic system — 203
8.1	The content of the Faroese vowels — 203
8.1.1	Organization of distinctive features — 204
8.1.2	Towards a unary hierarchy — 210
8.2	Grasping the behaviors of Faroese vowels — 213

8.2.1	Diphthongs and long vowels —	213
8.2.2	Dialectal variations —	224
8.2.3	Glide insertion —	238
8.3	Morphophonemic alternations rather than phonological regularities? —	242
9	Consonants —	247
9.1	Obstruents —	247
9.1.1	Stops —	248
9.1.2	Fricatives —	258
9.2	Sonorants —	269
9.2.1	Voicing —	269
9.2.2	Velarity and palatality —	270
9.2.3	Gemination and dissimilation —	272
9.3	Approximants —	273
9.3.1	Voicing —	273
9.3.2	Trill —	274
9.3.3	Retroflexion —	275
9.3.4	Glide —	275
9.3.5	Gemination —	276
10	Formalization of the consonantal mechanisms —	283
10.1	The content of the Faroese consonants —	283
10.1.1	Towards a feature hierarchy —	284
10.1.2	Towards an element hierarchy —	293
10.2	Mechanisms involving deletion and/or movement —	299
10.2.1	Cluster reduction —	299
10.2.2	Metathesis —	314
10.3	Mechanisms affecting melody and/or structure —	319
10.3.1	Preaspiration —	320
10.3.2	Palatalization —	324
10.3.3	Semi-vocalization —	327
10.3.4	Dissimilation —	328
11	Aspects of the morphology-phonology interface —	332
11.1	The phonology-morphology-lexicon interface —	335
11.1.1	Non-phonological vowel alternations —	335
11.1.2	Non-phonological consonant alternations —	337
11.2	Morphologically derived environment effects —	339

XII — Contents

- 11.2.1 MDEE affecting vowels — 340
- 11.2.2 MDEE affecting consonants — 343
- 11.3 The preference for a trochee — 348
- 11.4 Phonological interpretation of morphologically complex words:
derivations and compounds — 350
- 11.4.1 Affixes and particles at the edge — 351
- 11.4.2 Compounds — 354
- 11.5 Strata — 355

Conclusion — 362

References — 363

Index — 375