

Jay Sullivan

Egyptian Gothic

1884–1920

palgrave
macmillan

CONTENTS

|          |                                                                                                                           |           |
|----------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------|
| 1 | Introduction                                                                                                       | 1  |
|          | Western Attitudes towards Mummies 1800–Present                                                                     | 1         |
|          | The Mummy in The Museum                                                                                            | 4         |
|          | The Emergence of the Egyptianised Gothic                                                                           | 15        |
|          | Fin-de-siècle Fears and the Rise of the New Woman                                                                  | 20        |
|          | Who was Reading The Egyptianised Gothic?                                                                           | 23        |
|          | Sensual Encounters with the Mummy                                                                                  | 25        |
|          | Bibliography                                                                                                       | 27        |
| 2 | Touch in the Egyptianised Gothic                                                                                   | 31 |
|          | In the Grip of the Past: Acquisitional Touch in the Museum                                                         | 32        |
|          | Egyptologists and Acquisitional Touch                                                                              | 46        |
|          | Bringing Horror Home: Touch in the Private Collection                                                              | 54        |
|          | ‘Not So Much Polished Memento Mori’: Touch Between the Living and the Dead                                         | 62        |
|          | ‘Untouched, Unchanged, Unstained.’ Contaminating Touch in The Beetle                                               | 71        |
|          | Bibliography                                                                                                       | 84        |
| 3 | Comparative Olfactory Encounters in Late Victorian Mummy Fiction                                                   | 89 |
|          | ‘Unable to Endure the Perfume of their Ancient Egyptian’: Pungency in Amelia Edward’s A Thousand Miles Up the Nile | 89        |

|   |                                                                                                                                          |     |
|---|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
|   | Smell as a 'Relic' or 'Survival' of the Ancient Past                                                                              | 92  |
|   | 'Comparative Encounters': Racial Asymmetries in the Egyptianised Gothic                                                           | 100 |
|   | Comparable Encounters and the Perfumed Egyptianised Gothic                                                                        | 104 |
|   | Smelling Marked and Unmarked Bodies in the Egyptianised Gothic                                                                    | 110 |
|   | Menstrual Orchids and Other Comparable Encounters                                                                                 | 114 |
|   | Bibliography                                                                                                                      | 117 |
| 4 | Gaze, The Mummified Body and the Iconography of Colonialism                                                                       | 121 |
|   | Gazing at the Artefacts: Mummies at the Museum                                                                                    | 124 |
|   | The Sleeping Beauty Mummy: An Egyptian Coquette                                                                                   | 134 |
|   | Gaze, Resurrection and Revenge in She                                                                                             | 138 |
|   | She's Influence on Later Texts                                                                                                    | 152 |
|   | Eyes with Powers of Penetration: The Beetle and Pharos the Egyptian                                                               | 162 |
|   | Bibliography                                                                                                                      | 174 |
| 5 | Sound Imperialism in the Egyptianised Gothic                                                                                      | 177 |
|   | Soundscapeing the Egyptianised Gothic                                                                                             | 181 |
|   | Music as Antagonism in 'A Descent into Egypt'                                                                                     | 186 |
|   | Feminine Musicality: Alluring Eroticised Sounds in Ziska: The Problem of a Wicked Soul, Pharos the Egyptian and A King in Babylon | 196 |
|   | Cursed Utterances: Oral Culture in 'Death's Secret' and Sax Rohmer                                                                | 202 |
|   | Horrific Voices: Human Inarticulacy and Natural Articulacy                                                                        | 217 |
|   | Bibliography                                                                                                                      | 229 |
| 6 | Conclusion: Mummy Consumption, Tutmania and the End of the Egyptianised Gothic                                                    | 233 |
|   | A Brief History of Eating Mummies                                                                                                 | 236 |
|   | Swallowing Mummy-Dust: Taste in the Egyptianised Gothic                                                                           | 238 |
|   | 'That I Might be Consumed'—Cannibal Mummies                                                                                       | 240 |
|   | Consumer Taste: the Shift from Private Collectors to Mass Commercialism                                                           | 243 |

|                                                                   |     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Birth of Tutmania and the Death of the Egyptianised Gothic | 244 |
| Wrapping It Up                                             | 249 |
| Bibliography                                               | 249 |
| Bibliography                                               | 253 |
| Index                                                      | 287 |