

Contents

Part I The Essence of Confucianism

1	The Features of the Confucian School	3
2	The Contention Between the Pre-qin Scholars and the Confucians	11
3	An Overview of Confucianism in the Qin and Han Periods	17
4	Analyses of Confucianism by Modern Scholars	23

Part II Pre-Qin Confucianism

5	‘Benevolence’ (Ren) and ‘Rites’ (Li): Confucius and the Establishment of the Confucian Spirit	33
6	The Studies of the Seventy Disciples and the Differentiation and Development of the Confucian School	41
6.1	Yan Hui	43
6.2	Zigong and You Zi	43
6.3	The Eight Divisions of Confucianism, and Others	45
6.4	Zisi and the Si-Meng School	47
7	Cosmology and the Philosophy of Life in The Doctrine of the Mean and Yi Zhuan	51
7.1	‘The Doctrine of the Mean’ and ‘Honesty’	51
7.2	The Study of the Relationship Between Heaven and Humanity in Yi Zhuan	54
8	Mencius’s Theory of Innate Goodness and Benevolent Governance	57
8.1	The Theory of Innate Goodness	57
8.2	Benevolent Governance and the Tao of the Monarch	60

9	Xunzi: Innate Evil, Rites, and Laws	65
9.1	Transmitting the Classics	65
9.2	The Theory of Innate Evil	66
9.3	Respect and Adherence to Rituals and Laws	68
9.4	Hegemony of the Monarch	70

Part III Confucianism During the Han and Wei-Jin Periods

10	The Transition from Legalism to Confucianism	77
11	Dong Zhongshu's Study of the Unity Between Heaven and Man	83
12	The Exclusive Reverence of Confucianism and the Application of the Classics	89
12.1	The Exclusive Reverence of Confucianism and the System of Boshi (Expert)	89
12.2	The Application of the Classics and the Evolution of Classical Studies in the Western and Eastern Han Dynasties	93
13	The Confucian Themes in Wei-Jin Metaphysical Studies (Xuanxue)	99

Part IV The Development of Confucianism During the Tang, Song, Yuan, Ming, and Qing Dynasties

14	Han Yu's Theory of 'Confucian Orthodoxy' (Transmission of the Tao)	109
15	Heavenly Principles and Human Desires: The Formation and Features of Song-Ming Neo-Confucianism	115
16	Zhu Xi: The Culmination of Neo-Confucianism	129
17	The Study of the Mind by Lu (Lu Jiuyuan) and Wang (Wang Yangming)	135
17.1	The Debate Between Zhu and Lu and the Introduction to Lu Jiuyuan	135
17.2	Wang Yangming and 'The Cultivation of Conscience'	138
17.3	Four Lines of Teaching and the Later Generations of the Wang School	141
18	The Exploration of Confucian Topics in the Late Ming and Early Qing Periods	147
19	Han Studies and Song Studies: Confucianism in the Qing Dynasty	153

Part V	New Confucianism and New Directions in the Development of Confucianism
20	The New Culture Movement and Transition for New Confucian Thoughts	165
21	Post-May Fourth Movement: Key Figures and the Evolution of New Confucianism	171
21.1	'New Confucianism' and 'New Confucians'	171
21.2	Genealogy of New Confucianism	173
21.2.1	The First Generation: First Group	173
21.2.2	The First Generation: Second Group	177
21.2.3	The Second Generation: Third Group	179
21.2.4	The Third Generation: Fourth Group	183
22	The Spiritual Orientation of New Confucianism After the May Fourth Movement	189
22.1	Emotional Commitment for Cultural Preservation	189
22.2	Dimensions of Confucianism in the Mind and Nature	193
22.3	Similarities and Differences Between Democracy and People-Centred Governance	196
22.4	Civilizational Discourse and Cultural Diversity	201
23	The Formation of New Confucianism in the Chinese Mainland and the Future Directions of Development of Confucianism	207